SIX DROWNED WHEN BOAT SINKS NEAR ST. CHARLES

Husband of One of Victims Swims With Daughter, 3, to Shore After Scow Goes Down in Mississippi River Slough.

OVERLAND MAN, WIFE LOSE LIVES

Two Boys and Girl Also Meet Death—Accident Occurs When Overloaded Craft Ships Water 80 Feet From Shore.

Six of the eight occupants of an overloaded scow were drowned in a Mississippi River slough 10 miles south of St. Charles at 4:30 p. m. yesterday when the boat sank 80 feet from shore. Only one member of the family party could swim and in the time he had carried his 3-year-old daughter to safety the other had disappeared.

The dead—James A. Kinn, 44 years old, 6660 Argyle avenue, Overland, proprietor of the Auto Parts Co., 411 Easton avenue; Mrs. Theresa Kinn, 33, his wife; Charles Kinn, 9, their son; Mrs. Mary Coe, 36, 1612 Glenwood avenue, Wellston, a sister of Mrs. Kinn; Homer Vincent Coe, 8, her son; La Verne Coe, 13, her niece.

The two families motored to St. Charles County early yesterday afternoon for an outing at a cottage recently purchased by Kinn at War Eagle landing on the Mississippi. When the board Kinn had obtained a flat-bottomed scow powered by a light motor, in which the party set out shortly before the accident, intending to drift down the slough for some fishing.

One told authorities at St. Charles that the boat had drifted out about 50 feet from shore when it suddenly began shipping water over its bow and sank almost instantly. Members of the party, fully clothed, were struggling in the water as the only swimmer, shouted for them to hold on to the boat, which came up and floated after it had been relieved of its load.

Coe took hold of Virginia and was holding to the boat, he said. His wife and her son, Charles, disappeared beneath the water. As he struck out for the shore, he continued, Kinn was struggling to hold above water another member of the party, apparently one of the children.

Others Disappear. "When I got to the shore," Coe said, "the others had disappeared. I took me about 30 minutes to find my wife and then we began dragging the bodies."

The body of La Verne Coe was found within an hour and artificial respiration measures were employed in an unsuccessful effort to revive her.

Search for the other bodies, interrupted by darkness, was resumed early today. The bodies of Kinn and his son were recovered this morning.

La Verne's mother is Mrs. Cretia Coe, said to be a resident of a downtown hotel. La Verne resided with the family of Homer Coe and was graduated last year from Wellston Junior High School. Another child of Mrs. de Croix, Betty, 10, resides at the home of Mrs. Emma Coe in St. Charles.

Homer Vincent Coe was a fourth grade student at the School of Notre Dame de Lourdes in Wellston. Kinn is survived by two sons, Edward, a student at Christian Brothers College and James, 20, an employee of the Auto Parts Co.

WOMAN WHO TOLD FAKE KIDNAPING STORY KILLS SELF
Had Said She Could Not Stand Publicity After Exposure by Federal Agents.

By the Associated Press.
KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 10.—Mrs. Laura Ellis, 45 years old, shot and killed herself in a vacant garage Saturday after telling an operator in her beauty parlor she could not stand the publicity attending announcement of Federal investigators that she had admitted her accounts of being abducted and tortured were imaginary.

She told the story at Decatur, Ill., where she said she was released June 22. On Aug. 3, she was found bound and gagged in her apartment. Her hair had been cut off and placed in a sack at her side. She told police her tormentors said their purpose was to force her friend, W. Lee Vaughn, a theater man, to employ union labor. Federal authorities later said she admitted making up the stories in an effort to increase Vaughn's interest in her.

Her body was found yesterday by Cecil Quinn, who with his wife, was looking for a house to rent. Mrs. Ellis had removed her dress and hung it with her purse on a nail before shooting herself.

HUGE WAVES AGAIN BATTER SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA SHORE
Big Swells Founding Beach From Malibu to San Juan Capistrano.

By the Associated Press.
LOS ANGELES, Sept. 10.—Huge ground swells renewed their buffeting of the Southern California coast yesterday. The center of the ocean's attack was at Newport Beach, where six blocks of Pacific Electric Railway track were undermined and the foundations swept from under several houses.

The mammoth swells, running before a strong easterly wind, pounded the shores along the Southern California coast from Malibu to San Juan Capistrano.

Scientists have been at a loss to explain definitely the strange behavior of the ocean. At Santa Monica Beach the rollers were breaking as far off shore as 1000 feet, and some were 20 to 30 feet high.

Asserts He Has Information Sailors Were Hired Day Before Sailing for Each Trip.

By the Associated Press.
MATAN, N. J., Sept. 10.—Representative William H. Sutherland telegraphed today to the Federal Steamboat Inspection Service, saying he had information leading him to believe the crew of the Morro Castle was "new and undisciplined."

The telegram was addressed to Dickerson N. Hoover, Director-General of Steamboat Inspection for the Department of Commerce, who is conducting a hearing into the cause of the ship disaster.

It said: "Information in my possession leads me to believe that the crew of the Morro Castle was new and undisciplined, and that this line hired the crew just before the day of sailing, dismissing the crew after each trip and engaging another crew before sailing again. Request you carefully investigate this condition."

NRA CIGARETTE PRICE ORDER
In States Having Stamp Tax. It Is to Be Added to Minimum.
By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Hugh S. Johnson today ordered the NRA's price order regulation to provide that in states having a stamp tax on cigarettes "such tax shall be added to the minimum price whether the seller is located within or without the state."

NRA's price order resulted in fixing a minimum of two packages for 25 cents for the popular brands and was designed to prevent large chains which sell cigarettes as a side-line from using them to obtain customers for other goods.

WALTER WILLIAMS TO RESIGN AS HEAD OF MISSOURI U.

Educator, Who Has Reached Established Retirement Age of 70, to Ask Today to Be Relieved.

BOARD'S ATTITUDE NOT MADE KNOWN

It Is Not Certain Curators Will Let Him Step Aside Now—Temporary Executive May Be Named.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 10.—It was learned today that President Walter Williams of the University of Missouri had decided to submit his resignation to the Board of Curators, at its meeting here this afternoon. Williams in July reached the age of 70, which is the established age for retirement of members of the university's teaching staff.

Williams had a severe illness last spring, and underwent a major operation in a St. Louis hospital in June. He has been head of the university since June, 1930, and was founder of the university's School of Journalism, and its dean since the school opened in 1908. The holder of several honorary degrees, he is not a college graduate.

In advance of the board meeting, it was not certain that the curators would be ready to accept an outright resignation, though it was understood that they would name someone to perform executive duties for so long as the president may desire assistance or complete relief from his duties. Plans for selecting an acting or assistant president from the faculty were mentioned by some members.

May Be President Emeritus.
In the event of his retirement from the presidency, it is expected that Williams will be designated as president emeritus of the university for life.

It would be possible also for him to retain the position of dean of the School of Journalism. He has kept the title of dean while serving as president, and Frank L. Martin, in active charge of the school, has been designated as associate dean. The School of Journalism, as founded by Williams in 1908, under A. Ross Hill as president of the university, was the first school of its kind to be organized as a department of a major educational institution.

Editor of Paper at 30.
Williams, born in Belleville, Mo., learned typesetting and attended the local schools there, and was editor and part owner of the Booneville Advertiser at the age of 20. He moved to Columbia in 1890, and was editor of the Columbia Herald for 18 years. He was a member of the University's Board of Curators for several years before he resigned, on the approval by the Board of his plans for a School of Journalism, of which he was placed in charge.

While an editor in Columbia, Williams was president of the National Editorial Association, and was active in organizing national and international groups of editors. He was organizer and secretary of the World Press Parliament, held in St. Louis in connection with the World's Fair of 1904. His book, "The State of Missouri," a collection of the resources and attractions of the state, was the official publication of the state's commission at the Fair. He made various journeys to foreign countries to attend press conferences, and on special missions.

How He Became President.
The vacancy in the office of president, which he was called to fill in 1930, resulted from differences between the curators and the president, Dr. Stratton D. Brooks. The final action came after the controversy over the resignation of Prof. Max F. Meyer's resignation. The board members stated that their dissatisfaction with Dr. Brooks was not caused by his action in the matter of the questionnaire, as the board had upheld his objections after a suspended Prof. Meyer. Other causes, the curators said, made a change in the president's office necessary. In conference with Gov. Caulfield, they selected Dean Williams as having the needed executive and diplomatic qualities.

Frank M. McDavid of Springfield, chairman of the curators, asked before the meeting as to the impending retirement of Williams, said, "I won't have anything to say about that until after the meeting."

At the president's residence, no statement could be obtained, but it was learned that Williams, who has been doing most of his university work at his home recently, expected to go to Jesse Hall for the curators' meeting.

STRIKE MEDIATORS ARRANGE MEETING WITH MILL GROUPS

Other Leaders of Industry Called in After Textile Institute Rejects Union Offer.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—A general conference of representatives of cotton textile manufacturers and the President's board of inquiry will be held here this week, probably tomorrow.

W. D. Anderson, president of the American Cotton Manufacturers Association, a Southern group, and Ernest H. Hood, president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, have been asked to bring representatives of the industry to Washington to present a cross-section viewpoint of the operators.

This development came after George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, had conferred for three hours with the board, but at the conclusion merely announced the conference would be continued late today.

While the conference was on Francis J. Gorman, head of the strike committee, announced that the strikers' arbitration offer would expire at 6 o'clock tonight.

The strike entered its second week with efforts toward a settlement at a standstill after the manufacturers had rejected an arbitration proposal made by union leaders.

Gorman had proposed that the President's board of inquiry, headed by Gov. John G. Winant of New Hampshire, arbitrate the dispute with both sides agreeing to abide by its decision and with all mills closed during the negotiations.

Sloan termed the proposals "of a character that makes them utterly impossible from every standpoint." Sloan met with the mediation board today to continue presenting the manufacturers' side of the conflict.

LINER SANTA RITA, FIRE IN HOLD, MAKES PORT

Officers Blame Radicals for Blaze on Grace Steamer and the Morro Castle.

By the Associated Press.
BALBOA, C. Z., Sept. 10.—The Grace liner Santa Rita, a fire smoldering in its hold and passengers sleeping soundly in their cabins, steamed into port today under its own power.

Canal Zone firemen who sped 50 miles into the Pacific Ocean to fight the blaze on the vessel, helped put out the fire.

A flood of carbon dioxide gas, rushed out to sea by the Canal Zone tug Favorite, helped check the fire which was working slowly through the cargo in No. 3 hatch.

Fire still smoldered in the cargo of cotton, wool and coffee when the ship docked, but Capt. Stevenson said it was under control.

Afire 200 Miles From Balboa.
The vessel, on the way from Buena Ventura to Balboa, flashed a radio message that fire had broken out yesterday afternoon. Its position then was about 200 miles from Balboa.

The Favorite was loaded with 70 tons of chemicals and put to sea. The tug met the liner about 50 miles from this port. Firemen, including Chief Campbell, boarded the Santa Rita with equipment and in a few minutes had the hold saturated with the flame-suffocating gas.

Radio Officer Declares He Had to Ask for Order to Send Out SOS

He Writes Vivid Account of the 25-Minute Delay After He Was Aroused by Fire-Fighters.

By GEORGE I. ALAGNA, First Assistant Radio Officer on Board the Morro Castle.

(Copyright, 1934.)
NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—I went to bed about 9 o'clock Friday night and was awakened about 9:30 by the chief radio officer, George White Rogers, who told me that Capt. Willmott had died.

I went back to sleep again after a lapse of perhaps half an hour. I was sleeping in the cabin adjoining the ship's radio room, which is on the hurricane deck directly back of the navigation officer's quarters. This cabin was separated from the navigation officer's quarters by a narrow passageway, and all of the radio force occupied it.

I was awakened again—this time by a heavy tramping of feet—and noticed it was exactly 2:56 in the morning.

The stateroom lights were on, smoke was in the air. Loud frantic yells came from men running to and fro past the portholes. Someone screamed:

"We can't control it, the pressure is gone."

Awakened His Chief.
I turned toward the radio room entrance. The third assistant radio officer, Charles Macki, was standing there. He said something unintelligible.

While jumping into my pants I spied Chief Radio Officer Rogers sleeping soundly. I shook him awake. He immediately dressed and replaced the third operator at the key. Upon entering the radio room I looked at the radio clock. It was exactly 3 o'clock. (I clearly recall my first thoughts—one more hour before my watch commenced.)

After informing Rogers that I was going to take a look at conditions I went on deck.

SAILOR SAYS FIRE SPREAD BEFORE ALARM SOUNDED

Deck Storekeeper on the Morro Castle Will Testify Drills Were Not Carried Out Properly.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Chief Officer W. F. Warms broke down and wept today at the Government's investigation of the burning of the liner Morro Castle, as he told of the death of his captain, Robert R. Willmott, aboard the ship the night before the tragedy early Saturday which resulted in the loss of more than 100 lives.

Capt. Willmott had not been ill on the way out, Warms testified, and he died suddenly of acute indigestion Friday night.

"We laid out the captain—God rest his soul—and I went to the bridge," Warms testified.

"I'm not myself," the chief officer said. His head dropped and he placed his handkerchief over his eyes and wept. Sobs shook his shoulders.

"We were pals," he told the board. A moment later he straightened in his chair and said "OK." United States Prosecutor Present.

The inquiry, presided over by Dickerson N. Hoover, Assistant Director of the Bureau of Navigation at Washington, opened before a packed hearing room at the New York Custom House.

At the hearing table with Hoover was Martin Conboy, United States Attorney, an "observer," John L. Crone, superintendent of steam boat inspectors of the Second Inspection District; James Smith, local inspector of boilers; and Capt. Carl C. Nielsen, local inspector of hulls.

Conboy informed the board of investigation at the start that he intended to follow up the hearing with his own inquiry.

"Our investigation may be much more detailed and unlimited than the scope of this investigation," he said. "All information will be used, and the investigation will be conducted personally by me."

Fire

For the purposes of inquiry the federal investigators are fortunate that all nine officers of the Morro Castle survived the tragedy, and available to provide accounts of what took place. The officers, headed by Acting Capt. Warm, will first be heard, Hoover said, after that the board will hear survivors from among the passengers and crew, and will examine the log of the liner.

Many stories have been told by survivors of what happened aboard Morro Castle as a rising wind whipped the flames through the ship, yet none of them has given a definite suggestion as to the actual cause of the fire.

Some said a bolt of lightning struck the ship. Others said the fire broke out in the library. The S. S. told that the fire was near the radio room. There is the opinion of others that such a little thing as a discarded cigarette or a coal from a pipe may have started the fire.

Ward Line officers said there was nothing in the cargo that could have started the fire.

WILKINS SUGGESTS WORLD CLIMATE FORECAST

An unidentified society will supply $100,000, if governments assist.

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Sept. 10.—Provided governments in South America, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa think the scheme worth while, an unidentified society is prepared to spend $100,000 during the next 10 years in an effort to make it possible to forecast the world's climates.

Sir Hubert Wilkins, noted explorer, said today he could not disclose the name of the organization which interested enough in meteorological observation to promise a grant of $100,000 annually for 10 years.

He said, was subject to the furnishing of $250,000 (about $250,000) by South Africa, Australia, New Zealand and South American countries to establish 12 observation stations in the Antarctic.

By a correlation of all temperatures, Wilkins said it would be possible to forecast world's climates, and he hoped to maintain five stations in the Arctic and 12 in the Antarctic for one sun cycle period.

COUNT INDICATES FAILURE OF CITY SALES TAX BILL

Revenue Chairman Says Passage Is Doubtful—Canvass Shows 13 Aldermen Oppose Measure.

TWO UNCERTAIN BUT INCLINED TO VOTE NO

Another Refuses to Commit Himself—Building Trades Board Indorses Levy, Central Trades Objects.

Passage of the city sales tax bill appeared doubtful when the Board of Aldermen convened today to begin consideration of the measure, which was introduced by the special bipartisan Revenue Committee.

Completion of a canvass by the board showed that 13 Aldermen were inclined to vote for the tax, while 13 have decided to vote against it, two others have not made up their minds but are inclined to oppose the bill, and one remains on the fence. The bill requires at least 15 votes for passage, with all members present.

Furthermore, there is a possibility that one of the proponents may change his mind, although there is one opponent who might also change his attitude until the bill comes up for a vote.

Brown's Views Not Known.

Algermen Wetzell (Rep.), Lange (Rep.) and Pahl (Dem.) told the Post-Dispatch today they would vote against the sales tax. Aldermen Genteman (Dem.) and Israel (Dem.) said they had not made up their minds finally, but they were inclined to oppose the bill. Aldermen Brown (Dem.), remaining undecided, said he would not disclose his attitude until the bill comes up for a vote.

After the formal first reading of the bill the board adjourned until Wednesday, when the measure will be referred to the Legislative Committee. The board may obtain a speedy report from that committee and meet again Thursday for final action.

It looks like we can't put the bill over," said Alderman Collier, chairman of the Revenue Committee, discussing the canvass of the board made by the Post-Dispatch. He said he would call the committee together if the sales tax is defeated, and ask it what shall be considered next to meet the city's pressing revenue problem. Probably the income tax will be considered at that time, he said. Last week the committee chose the sales tax instead of the income tax.

Receives 20 Protests.

Alderman Pahl explained that he has received more than 200 letters and telephone messages from people of his ward, the Twenty-fourth, who opposed the sales tax, and that he felt he should vote as his constituents desired.

Lange feared the tax would have a serious effect on business in the city and would give suburban business an unfair advantage. Israel said there was no doubt that sentiment in his downtown ward, the Fifth, was against the sales tax. Genteman said: "I haven't made up my mind, but I feel quite sure I will vote against the bill."

Alderman Neumann (Rep.), minority floor leader, who voted with the four Democrats on the bipartisan committee to propose the sales tax and who had announced he would vote for the bill, is considering whether he will change his mind and vote against it. Merced, in many lines in his ward, the Twelfth, in Carondelet, have told him they opposed the tax. Alderman Brinkman (Rep.), who announced his opposition to the bill, said he might vote for it if the sales rate was reduced from 2 per cent to 1 per cent.

As matters stand, there are 10 Democrats and three Republicans on the board favoring the bill, three Democrats and 10 Republicans, against it, and one Democrat undecided.

Representatives of the council called at City Hall today to inform the administration of the action. Thomas P. Quinn, president of the council, which represents 30,000 men in affiliated trades, told City Controller Hay the council approved the tax because it would make much work possible through provision for issuance of the $16,100,000 bonds voted last May. The council also advocated the bond issue.

Quinn said 46 per cent of the men in the building trades were unemployed, 36 per cent were working part time and only 18 per cent fully employed. Harry Hagen, business agent of the Lathers' Union, said building men could afford the sales tax if they could have work. He said he could not understand why merchants are opposing the tax, when issuance of the bonds and expenditure of related PWA grants would mean the spending of more than $21,000,000. Hay advised the delegation to tell the Aldermen of their views.

The other hand, Central Labor Union, by a nearly unanimous vote yesterday, expressed opposition to the sales tax, and urged the administration that it should direct its Legislative Committee to appear before the Aldermen.

men. There were 200 or more delegates present.

Maurice J. Cassidy, chairman of the city's Efficiency Board and former secretary of the Building Trades Council, argued in favor of the sales tax before Central Trades & Labor Union. He said it was necessary to adopt some new form of taxation in order to meet the city's financial problems and make possible the issuance of the bonds voted last May. Issuance of the bonds, he pointed out, would provide much employment.

Poor people would eventually bear the burden of any tax, he asserted, adding that the organization had failed to respond to the general invitation of the aldermanic Revenue Committee for suggestions as to how the city could raise money. There was no protest from labor when prices of foodstuffs rose recently, Cassidy went on.

Income Levy More Fair.

William J. Fitzmaurice, president of Central Trades & Labor Union, led the opposition to the sales tax. He insisted an income tax would be more equitable, putting the burden on those who could stand it best, while the sales tax would bear on the poor. The opponents of the sales tax said it would be hard on the unemployed and on workers out on strike.

Fitzmaurice argued that "big business" was responsible for selection of the sales tax instead of the income tax by the Revenue Committee. In reply, Cassidy said he supposed the income tax was opposed by the same business interests now against the sales tax. The sales tax, he continued, is opposed by "big business."

Cassidy said today that he thought the Carpenters' District Council would favor the sales tax.

The sales tax bill would impose a levy for three years, with a rate of 2 per cent the first year and 1 per cent thereafter, on retail sales and sales of services. The city needs more money for these objects: Anticipated deficit of $2,452,000 in the bond sinking fund; additional income for the sinking fund to support the new bonds; anticipated deficit of $1,800,000 in general municipal accounts; public relief, believed to require $3,000,000 or more annually.

TWO EXPLOSIONS ON THE BEACHED MORRO CASTLE

People swarmed on the beach, and pleasure craft closed in on the seaward side of the big ship to give their owners and their friends a chance to stare.

The evidences of disaster were vivid. The flames had blistered the masts and the twin stacks, blistered the sides until the red lead showed and worked through the superstructure until the top became a mere blackened frame.

Hardly a portion of the ship escaped the flames. They consumed the deck planking except in the extreme afterpart of the ship. They made of the series of state rooms and small cabins, the dining rooms, reading rooms, lounge and bar one vast hall, clear except for the twisted white steel girders and framework of steel furniture.

Fire Hose Destroyed.

Where passengers, in anticipation of their arrival at New York gathered for farewell parties in the saloon, the ashes are ankle deep today. Metal parts of a trap drum lay on the floor, and throughout the ship investigators found the metallic couplings of hose, the brass nozzles and melted bits of fire extinguishers. The nozzles had been destroyed by the flames.

On the promenade deck all windows are gone, stove in by the crew, for splinters of glass lay among the debris. The deck plates had buckled under the heat and in some places members of the inspecting party had to tread carefully lest they fall into holes.

The sun deck ventilators were still giving off smoke today from the store rooms, where fire was raging, and from engine and fire rooms.

Captain's Cabin Still Burning.

Bedrooms, warped by the flames, lay in the state rooms where they fell when the beds gave way to the flames. No one could get to the captain's cabin under the bridge for the fire was still burning forward and the bridge and chart room were too hot to approach.

Some times the heat reaching those who made the inspection trip yesterday was like the draft from a blast furnace, and all over the ship acrid fumes were rising.

Oddly enough, pieces of paper here and there escaped the fire. A certificate of marriage, dated Aug. 30, 1934, and signed at the City Hall of Gloucester, Mass., by Frank Loveland Jr., 32, and Nathana Turk, 24, was found on the deck. Near it lay stubs of motor tour tickets which the couple had taken in Cuba. They were reported to have been saved after swimming in the sea for seven hours.

Most of a page from Eva Le Gallienne's autobiography was also found.

Larry Froebuck, a New York newspaper photographer, was overcome by smoke on the ship and was found by others in the party, hanging over the rail. His hands were blistered, his camera red hot. He was taken to Fitkin Memorial Hospital after physicians revived him.

Other newspaper men wore gas masks or wrapped towels around their heads as they moved through the ship over decks so hot their feet stung.

Fresh stories of heroism among those on board the ship were being told today by survivors. Helen Brodie, 28, one of those who was saved, told her brother, James, of Hartford, Conn., that a Fordham

10 to 12-Year Issue Offered at 3 1/4 Per Cent in Re-financing Plan—Average Has Been 3.18.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The Treasury yesterday announced its plans for refinancing $1,200,000,000 of fourth 4 1/2 per cent Liberty bonds, called for Oct. 15, and certificates of indebtedness totaling $524,758,500 which fall due Sept. 15.

Two-year notes bearing 1 1/2 per cent interest will be offered for certificates. Bond holders will be given the option of taking four-year 2 1/2 per cent notes or 10 to 12 year bonds bearing 3 1/4 per cent, and in either case will receive a bonus on the month's interest between Sept. 15, when the new issues are dated, and Oct. 15, the effective date for the bond call.

Some importance was attached to the fact that the Treasury was offering higher interest on the bonds than the average rate of 3.18 per cent on Government obligations prevailing several months ago.

Treasury officials had expressed hope of carrying out reconversion operations to reduce the interest rate. The bond market has been weak recently, and it was believed officials considered short-term obligations more likely to be absorbed.

With nearly $2,000,000,000 of securities to be cared for during September, it was indicated that the Treasury might carry out no further reconversion operations for three months. On Dec. 15 a total of $92,498,500 of certificates of indebtedness mature. On Jan. 1 bonus certificates of $164,700,000 fall due.

Treasury officials refused to predict whether a call would be issued in October for any of the $3,200,000,000 fourth Liberty 4 1/2's remaining out. If so, the call would be effective next April as a six-month notice period is required.

The new notes offered for refinancing will be exempt from all taxation except estate and inheritance. The bonds will be exempt except for surtaxes, estate, inheritance, excess profit and war profit taxes. Holdings of bonds up to $5000, however, will be completely exempt.

A Feeling of Peace.

The men, women and few children gathered there were already nervous and agitated, but all knelt on the deck while the priest prayed. Huddled together, Miss Brodie said, the passengers felt for the moment a feeling of peace.

Miss Brodie was making a Cuban cruise with a friend, Miss Agnes Berry of Springfield, Mass., who was lost. Her body was recovered and identified at the Seagirt encampment.

Coastal mariners here said today the job of getting the Morro Castle off the beach would not be an easy one, and doubt was voiced that it could be done at all.

The ship lies in six or eight feet of water at low tide. Its bow is buried deep in the sand and its propellers are visible.

Two tug boats hauled aboard yesterday, but could accomplish little, and gave up as darkness fell.

TWO CONVICTS KILLED IN RIOT IN ILLINOIS PRISON

Two Others and Guard Hurt in Fight at State-ville in Desperate Attempt to Escape.

By the Associated Press.

JOLIET, Ill., Sept. 10.—Two convicts were killed and two others wounded today in a desperate attempt to escape aboard a locomotive leaving the Stateville prison yard.

A guard was injured in the brief but vicious fight.

An attempt of five convicts to escape on a switch engine precipitated the fight.

As the penitentiary gates swung open to let the locomotive pull out, the five prisoners climbed aboard. The engineer felled one with an iron rod, and an alarm called guards on the run.

The wounded guard was slashed in the hand-to-hand fighting. Warden Whipp said the riot was put down after several minutes of fighting.

La Roy Lane, near Hebron, Denton County, a brother of Eugene Lane, was charged with murder in connection with the shooting of Deputy Chapman, in a complaint signed by Sheriff R. A. Schmid.

Lane denied he participated in the shooting. He said he and his brother saw a parked automobile and stopped their car a short distance away. As his brother alighted, he said, the men in the other car started shooting. He asserted he did not know whether his brother fired any shots.

The shooting occurred near the scene of several recent highway robberies.

Radio Officer's Story Of Delay in SOS Order

where there was danger due to the battery gas fumes. Looking around I noticed the emergency light was not on. I substituted another bulb, but got no results.

Within a few seconds the room was in darkness. The ship's power had gone off. I once I rushed to the switchboard and switched on the emergency batteries, and connected the aerial to the auxiliary to the transmitter. With the aid of a flashlight Rogers tuned this transmitter.

Put On Life Preservers. The third assistant was looking on in the radio room. Calling upon him to help me, I heard Acting Capt. Warm's voice bellowing orders. The flames on the port side momentarily caused the batteries in the emergency room to explode.

Telling Rogers I would be back, I ran out on deck. The flames were then covering the entire section behind the radio room. I ran forward. People were still on the lower deck, making their way into the lifeboats directly below the radio room. Screams came up from below. "God help those trapped."

Men were wildly running to and from the bridge. I heard Acting Capt. Warm's voice bellowing orders. The flames on the port side momentarily caused the batteries in the emergency room to explode.

It was now about 3:11 and Rogers had been on duty since 3. He had been listening to the normal messages exchanged in ship traffic.

At 3:12 he intercepted a call from a ship asking WSC, the Radio Marine station at Tussocken, whether he had any dope on a flaming ship along the Jersey Coast.

WSC replied he had not.

Trouble in Getting Orders. At 3:15 exactly, Rogers on his own initiative, sent out the generally call CQ, requesting all ships to stand by for an emergency.

Inasmuch as this was the ordinarily silent period, WSC asked Rogers to wait until 3:18. He turned to me and said: "WSC asks me to stop sending."

I said: "Stop nothing. It's an emergency."

He said: "Sure it is."

Then he began repeating his CQ. Then he told me: "Go to the bridge and get some orders."

After being knocked around by scampering men, I managed to reach the bridge. It was enveloped in smoke, pierced by the gleams of one or two flash lights.

Some one said: "The steering gear doesn't work."

A man was frantically turning the steering wheel. Searching out Capt. Warm, I asked for orders for the chief radio officer. His answering voice was lost in the clamor prevailing on the bridge. I told him Rogers was standing by in the radio room.

Finally Gets Order for SOS. I told Rogers the orders were to stand by. I remarked: "Plenty of ships around, cheer up."

The smoke and heat were becoming unbearable. "I must do something," I said to myself. "Back in a minute," I told Rogers, and left for the bridge.

Confusion reigned there. The life boat opposite the radio room was filling up with people and was being lowered. Yelling for Warm's, I told him and explained that conditions in the radio room were unbearable. He answered: "Can't help it, can't do anything."

I asked: "Well how about some orders. Rogers can't remain in the radio room much longer. The smoke and heat are terrific."

Warm's asked: "Can you send an SOS?"

I replied: "Certainly. We have been waiting for such order."

He said: "All right, send an SOS."

He started to walk toward the port wing of the bridge. I noticed that the steering wheel was unmanned.

I yelled: "What is the position? Off Sea Girl?"

He said: "Yeah. Tell them 20 miles south of Scotland Light."

I repeated the position to him and left for the radio room.

A thick cloud of smoke greeted me at the right wing of the bridge. I jumped into it. But the smoke could be so thick I could not possibly penetrate it. Returning to the wheelhouse, I shouted: "Where is the phone to the radio room located?"

Following in the footsteps of a sailor, I reached for a phone and pressed the radio room button. Then I suddenly remembered that the ship's power was out. Rushing out to the starboard wing of the ship, I tried to get through another dense cloud of smoke. But no luck. I retreated, gasping for air. "God help Rogers," I thought.

Ship Turning Unaided. Back on the bridge it was not encouraging. It was covered with smoke. The ship was turning.

around unaided.

I distinctly heard Mr. Warm's voice above the others.

"Change your course. Head her into the wind. Beach her."

Half choking, I managed to grab the side of the companionway leading to the lower deck. Surely, there I could get a few breaths of clean air. No, I was mistaken. The wind was blowing the smoke from aft on the port side right into the bridge. I could not see around me.

All was darkness. With arms outstretched, I groped all around me for the ladder to the bridge. When I felt the steps with my hands, I felt the steps with my hands. Choking with smoke half blinded, heart pounding terribly, I stumbled up the stairs. I could sense a weakening feeling over me.

Somehow I managed to climb up to the bridge again. I paused for a few seconds. The wind was shifting. Ah—the fresh air felt good.

Wiping my face with my shirt, I looked aft. I saw the smoke had cleared somewhat. Dashing toward the radio room, I ran until I was blocked by flames. Tall, hungry flames. I had overshot my mark and run into the radio room.

The darkness that enfolded the radio room had fooled me.

"Rogers," I yelled, and there he was tapping a key and managing to keep his flashlight trained on the radio equipment. I told him: "Warm's orders are to send an SOS."

We are 20 miles south of Scotland Light. He repeated it and out went the call of distress.

SOS Goes Out at 3:25 A. M. This was at exactly 3:25 a. m. I returned to the bridge.

"Rogers is sending out the SOS," I told Mr. Warm.

He asked: "What position did he send?"

"Twenty miles south of Scotland Light."

He walked away, and I returned to the radio room. Rogers was still pounding the key. I patted him on the back and went back to the bridge. I met the chief engineer in uniform, looking straight across the bow.

He exclaimed: "What can we do? What can we do?"

"Buck up," I said, and left him. Several lifeboats were in the water by now. Looking aft I saw, to my horror, one of the lifeboats caught on one end at a 45 degree angle. Fortunately it was empty.

Leaving the bridge, I returned to see Rogers. There he still sat, flashlight shining on the receiver and tapping the keys. I tried to cheer him, but I guess he didn't hear me. The smoke and heat, particularly the smoke, were unbearable.

Gets His Superior Away. Running to the bridge again, I grabbed hold of Mr. Warm's arm and told him that if he did not order Rogers to vacate the radio room the smoke would suffocate him. He replied: "All right, get him out."

Back I went to see Rogers. I nudged him and said: "Let's get out of here."

He said: "No, I've got to stand by."

"Mate's orders," I told him: "Go to the bridge."

Rogers was on the verge of unconsciousness. I shook him. He only nodded his head. I grabbed his arm and jerked him toward the door. This must have revived him, for he slowly arose and followed me out of the radio room.

We ran to the bridge. Mr. Warm had ordered all men to go to the forward peak deck, the very bow of the ship.

Seeing Rogers and me approaching, he repeated that all men were to go forward. In a split second, Rogers and I were there alone on the bridge.

Mr. Warm jumped over the bridge rail to the protruding deck on to the other side, and scrambled toward the port side, where a ladder led to the lower deck. I yelled to Rogers:

"Look at him. Jump over!"

"No," he said, "you first."

I jumped and he followed me. At this moment, a thick cloud of smoke covered the port half of this deck. There we were, trapped on the deck and completely cut off from escape.

Escape From the Bridge. I looked down on the deck below. It was a full 10-foot drop. I told Rogers it was our only escape. I had decided to jump over when I saw an opening in a cloud of smoke covering the ladder and my feet on the ladder. The smoke again covered the approach to the ladder. Running down to the bottom of the ladder, I looked up and saw Rogers suspended from the upper deck, ready to jump down to where I was.

Just then the smoke around the ladder cleared away once more and Rogers, in answer to my yells, rushed to the ladder and climbed down to where I was standing.

From there we had no trouble finding our way to the forward deck where the men were assembled.

Thanks to our presence of mind, Rogers and I had escaped the terrible fate of being burned alive.

At the forepeak, I found myself looking at a gray-haired lady wrapped in a coat, standing alone side of a bare-footed middle-aged man, who later proved to be her husband, a doctor.

I learned later she and her husband, sleeping amidships, were awakened by the smoke and noise and escaped by a stateroom window to the deck and made their way to where we found them. The old lady seemed to be very cool and brave.

I noticed that the ship was anchored.

We were about 19 or 20 gathered at the forepeak gazing at the funeral pyre aft. I heard someone say: "Poor Captain Willmot's body."

The First Rescue Ship. The bridge from C deck upward, was being devoured by gigantic flames. A thick cloud of yellow smoke extended from the port side of the ship down wind. The entire forward deck was hot and brilliantly lit by flames shooting skyward. A picture that I will not easily forget. Meanwhile Rogers was being besieged by the group around him, all asking if he had sent an SOS.

We anxiously awaited the lights and appearance of some rescuing ship. The buoy lights around us in the water were mistake, by the survivors for ships' lights. We were drenched by an intermittent down-pour of heavy rain. We did not feel the cold because of the heat sent off by the burning decks.

Suddenly we saw the mast lights of a ship penetrating the distant haze. Minutes went by with the lights not coming any nearer. Then came the reality that the rescue ship would not dare come near to our burning hulk. We thought perhaps she kept so far away because she thought we had an oil cargo.

Rogers took out his flashlight and began to blink signals to the rescue ship to send boats at once. The rescue ship appeared to be about five miles from our ship. Their lifeboat was not sighted until much later. The heavy sea was hampering them in reaching us. It seemed an eternity until they reported us. But it could not have been more than 45 minutes after we first signaled the ship. Dawn was just breaking as the lifeboat neared our craft.

The Attempts at Rescue. But rescue was not yet to be. The life boat continued on toward the after part of the Morro Castle. She was obscured from our vision by the dense pall of smoke.

Looking over the port bow toward the coastline, I saw two other boats about a thousand feet away. They were both partly filled with victims, who had gone overboard.

Francic voices arose from nowhere. Looking more carefully, we saw two or three life preservers bobbing around in the rough sea with their wearers madly waving for help. By this time the remainder of the people gathered on the forepeak could see this sight.

We all shouted and motioned to the life boats to turn back and pick up these people drifting in the troughs of the heavy seas. But they did not heed our calls.

I don't swim well myself, but I knew that several good swimmers were in our midst. I suggested that an attempt be made to save these people by ordering some of our men to bring them in. I was helpless to do anything further.

It was a ghastly sight to see these poor unfortunates helplessly floating with no attempt made to save their lives. Help so near and yet so far.

One of the men in the bow of the boat, looking toward the stern of the Morro Castle, spotted a woman's arm dangling limply out of a porthole.

She was struggling to save herself, but she perished.

WHOLESALE PRICES OF FOOD UP 22 PCT.

Post-Dispatch Bureau, 201-05 Kellogg Building.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The National Industrial Conference Board released today a set of statistics showing how rapidly the cost of living to wage earners is mounting.

From July to August retail food prices advanced 1.7 per cent, rent 1.1 per cent and coal 1 per cent. While these advances showed the marked trend upward, wholesale prices, according to figures given out by Isidor Lubin of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, were mounting even more sharply.

The fifth consecutive weekly advance, an increase of eight-tenths of a per cent for the week ending Sept. 1, Brought the wholesale price level to 77.5 per cent of the 1926 average, the highest level reached since January, 1931, according to Lubin.

Wholesale food prices have advanced 22.2 per cent over the low of this year which was on June 1. Lubin reported. Farm products have advanced 28 per cent over last June 1. The per cent of increase for all commodities over the low of 1934 was 9.2.

"Farm products, with a general rise of 24 per cent, reached a new high for the year," said Lubin, "and the highest point since December, 1930, when the index was 75.2. Among the farm products showing marked rises were barley, corn, oats, livestock and hay. Livestock increased more than 11 per cent during the week. Foods advanced by 1.5 per cent, also reaching a new high for the year, due to advances in the prices of cereal products, dried fruits, meats, lard and vegetable oils."

The retail figures of the National Industrial Conference Board do not reflect these latest wholesale advances. They showed that while food prices for last month were 4.8 per cent higher than for August, 1933, they were still 30.3 lower than in 1923.

The conference board report put the purchasing value of the dollar in August at 125.6 cents as compared with 128.4 cents in July, 1939 cents in April, 1933, and 100 cents in 1923.

UNION ARBITRATION OFFER REJECTED IN TEXTILE STRIKE

sides," Gorman said. "We have the authority and we have demonstrated it by the closing of the mills. We have proposed arbitration under fair conditions. We feel they are the only conditions that can make arbitration successful."

The presidential board, Gorman added, "should summon Mr. Sloan and demand from him that he act in his capacity as head of the Cotton Textile Institute. The strike chairman can speak for the textile workers. The board, I believe, should do likewise with the heads of the employers in wool and worsted, silk and the other divisions of the industry."

William Smith, secretary of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, with headquarters in Philadelphia, has issued a call to workers in non-union hosiery mills to join the textile strikers, effective Wednesday at midnight. Smith said the call was sent out after action of the Federation's general committee in Washington Saturday night.

He said the union would demand that all employers sign the existing full-fledged hosiery national labor agreement or a similar agreement to be drawn up for the seamless hosiery branch of the industry. Smith estimated the call affected 85,000 workers, of whom about 50,000 are in Pennsylvania.

John W. Edelman, research director of the Federation, said, "Despite the fact that we have union wage scales and union conditions in most plants, we have found the thing just doesn't work without contracts."

Workers now under contract, numbering 15,000 and mostly in the Philadelphia area, are not affected by the call.

Smith stated the strike call was followed by the signing of a union contract by the Modern Maid Hosiery Co. of South Danforth.

Three Mills Reopen, One Closes in New England Area.

BOSTON, Sept. 10.—Two Rhode Island textile plants, which were closed last week, and one in Massachusetts, which shut down before the national strike call was issued, resumed operations today. A plant in Pawtucket, R. I., employing 200, closed today as a result of the strike.

About 600 workers returned to their machines at the Warren Narrow Fabric Co. and the Warren Manufacturing Co. in Warren, R. I., and at the Luther Manufacturing Co. in Fall River. The total number on strike in New England is approximately 150,000.

Practically all plants which had not suspended operations were heavily picketed. No disorders were reported.

In Saylesville, R. I., the State police prevented mass picketing of the Sayles Finishing Co., employing 2000. The plant opened, apparently with a full complement of workers.

Mill Attempts to Operate, Road Leading to It Is Dynamited. CHERRYVILLE, N. C., Sept. 10.—Dynamite today tore up a section of road leading from the main highway to the Howell Mill. No one was injured.

The mill was the only one of Gaston County's 104 which attempted to operate. Two other mills which operated with reduced forces Saturday did not open today.

Striker Dies of Wounds from Fight in Which Six Were Killed. ANDERSON, S. C., Sept. 10.—Charles L. Rucker, 35 years old, a textile mill striker, died at Anderson County hospital yesterday.

Rucker was shot in the fight at Honea Path, S. C., Thursday, between armed workers and members of a union "flying squadron," in which six strikers were killed.

Eleven of the mills which resumed operations are in Lincoln

MAINE VOTING TODAY ON SENATOR, GOVERNOR

Republicans Have Based Campaign on Attack on Roosevelt Policies.

By the Associated Press. PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 10.—Maine voters are choosing a United States Senator, Congressmen and State officers today.

Gov. Louis J. Brann, first Democratic Governor in Maine in 16 years, was singled out by Republicans as a symbol of the "New Deal." His re-election, they asserted, would be construed throughout the country as endorsement of the Roosevelt administration.

Alfred K. Ames, Republican gubernatorial candidate and retired lumberman, fought the campaign on national issues, urging a return to "constitutional government."

United States Senator Frederick Hale (Rep.), seeking a third term, said Democratic success would be destructive of representative government in the United States.

The Governor said he had fulfilled his campaign pledge of an economical administration and should be re-elected without regard to national issues.

F. Harold Dubord, Democratic senatorial nominee, praised President Roosevelt as the first chief executive since Wilson "who thinks of the humble man and woman."

County, North Carolina. They employ about 1300 of the county's 1700 textile workers. Two plants remain closed.

Three small Mecklenburg County (Charlotte) plants reopened with approximately 500 at work. Other Mecklenburg plants remained closed.

The largest mill to reopen was at Mooreville, N. C., the Mooreville cotton mills, employing 1200.

The Chiquola mill at Honea Path, S. C., where a clash between union men and non-union men and officers resulted in the fatal shooting of seven men last week, re-opened with a full force today. It was guarded by 65 National Guardsmen.

WOMAN ROUTS THIEF CHOKING HER IN HOME

Man Running Away Is Picked Up by Police and Identified.

Miss Anna Hille, 62 years old, was dressing in her bedroom at 518 East Prairie avenue Saturday evening and was facing the dresser mirror, when she saw a man on his hands and knees crawl past the door.

She turned, demanded to know what the man wanted, and he rose and began to choke her. She fought him off and screamed. A neighbor, John Geritz, ran into the house and the man ran away, taking Miss Hille's purse, which contained $2 or $3.

Geritz's wife, who was outside, said she saw two men run away from the house and recognized one. Just before the police broadcast a description of one man and his name, Detectives Kube and Krcma appeared on the scene with him in their custody.

"We found this guy running," they said. "He didn't have a good explanation of why he was running, so we picked him up."

Miss Hille said he was the man who choked her, and he was held, pending application for a warrant today.

Woman Fights Negro.

Mrs. Malinda La Junes, 50, arrived at her apartment at 3862 Washington boulevard shortly after Saturday midnight, and a Negro, who was behind her, pushed her into the apartment.

Mrs. La Junes struggled with him, then threw her purse out into the hall. The Negro ran after it and she slammed the door. The robber got away with the purse, which contained 15 cents.

A Negro holdup man accosted Lloyd Kiefer of Perryville, Mo., and Miss Ada Cissel, 5111 Enright avenue, as they were getting into Kiefer's automobile on Theresa avenue south of Washington boulevard early Sunday. He took $9 from Kiefer and $7 from Miss Cissel.

Man and Woman Held Up.

Just before Saturday midnight a Negro with a pistol held up Jerome McMahon, 4803 Fountain avenue, and Miss Louise Fisher, 3738 Enright avenue, in front of Miss Fisher's home. He took McMahon's wallet, containing $29.

A window was smashed at the Walkover Shoe Co., 612 Olive street, some time yesterday and a pair of shoes, valued at $6.50, stolen. Later, at Hanan & Sons, Inc., two pairs, valued at $21, were stolen after a window had been smashed.

TWIN BROTHERS, WIFE OF ONE SHOT TO DEATH IN QUARREL

Police Think Both Men Fired at Woman, Then Ended Lives at Shawnee, Ok.

By the Associated Press.

SHAWNEE, Ok., Sept. 10.—A woman, her husband, and his twin brother were shot to death yesterday in a Shawnee home.

Police, reconstructing the affray from the testimony of two witnesses, said Cole McDaniels shot his wife in a family quarrel, then killed himself.

His 40-year-old twin brother, Com McDaniels, they said, took the pistol from his brother's hand, threatened the two witnesses, fired another bullet into the body of his brother's wife, then ended his own life. The men, officers said, had been drinking.

A small son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cole McDaniels survive. Com McDaniels was unmarried.

ACQUITTED OF MURDER OF ALABAMA GIRL, 19

Man Had Been Accused of Killing Student Who Resisted His Advances.

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 10.—Harold Taylor, 28 years old, was acquitted yesterday of the charge of killing Faye New, 19, college student.

In a courtroom crowded with spectators, C. M. Wood, foreman, announced yesterday "We the jury find the defendant not guilty." Marvin Taylor, former City Comptroller and father of the defendant, clasped his son to him. Young Taylor was jubilant, shouting, "I never felt better in my life." Surrounded by joyful relatives, he was hustled into an automobile after signing a $2000 bond for release on charges of attempting to attack Mrs. Clara Cost, Birmingham divorcee, and drove away to the bedside of his mother, who is ill.

Morel Montgomery, Taylor's attorney, said Cecil Deason, deputy solicitor, had agreed to drop the charge preferred by Mrs. Cost if Taylor was acquitted on the murder charge, but Deason could not be reached.

Body Found in Ditch.

Faye New was found in a deep ditch beside a cotton patch in an isolated section of abandoned mines, Aug. 22, with two deep stab wounds in her throat. Taylor, with whom the girl had driven off on the night of Aug. 20, said she had jumped from his parked car a mile away on a lonely road, shortly after midnight, when she became indignant at his advances.

The State based its murder charge on circumstantial evidence, largely assertions that the shoes the defendant wore fitted a man's tracks that led across a cotton patch to a ditch where the girl's body was found.

Montgomery based his defense on a lack of motive. In his arguments he charged A. E. Cain, suitor for the girl's hand and a State witness, had killed her "in a jealous rage."

Says Girl Jumped From Car.

Taylor's own story was that a few minutes after he met the girl he asked her to go for a ride. Leaving the home of Mrs. Bessie Reeves, friend of the girl, who had declined to accompany them, Taylor said he drove to a side road near Irondale, where he made advances. "She jumped from the car," Taylor testified. He said the girl refused to heed his entreaties to let him drive her to town.

The charge of attempted attack was filed by Mrs. Cost a few days after Faye New's body was found. She testified at the trial that Taylor attempted to attack her and that she was able to leave his car only through a ruse. Mrs. Cost said this occurred on the afternoon of Aug. 20, only a few hours before Taylor met Faye New.

16 INJURED IN LONDON POLITICAL DEMONSTRATIONS

100,000 Fascists, Anti-Fascists and Curious Gather in Hyde Park at Same Time.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Missiles were thrown at Sir Oswald Mosley, leader of the British Fascists, yesterday in a crowd of 100,000 persons during one of the biggest political demonstrations ever held in England.

Although some 30 persons were injured in isolated outbreaks and 16 arrested, the huge demonstration passed off in comparative quiet, the police having control throughout. Mosley was not hurt. There were two simultaneous demonstrations, held in Hyde Park—Fascists and anti-Fascists. Hordes of people sang, shouted and made speeches, spending nearly three hours trying to drown each other out.

Elaborate police precautions were taken as the temper of the opposed crowds threatened to develop grave violence. A wall of police surrounded the contingent of 5000 uniformed Fascist men and women mustered around seven platforms—the biggest turnout in the two years since the British organization was founded. Meanwhile, moving contingents of mounted and foot police kept an open space between the Fascist army and the surrounded throngs, the greatest part of which consisted of curious sightseers, well-dressed habitués of the West End and American tourists. Scotland Yard's new autogyro hovered over the treetops.

WORTH SEEING
Past and Present

MILES TO SEE

Here is a new kind of Century of Progress for you to see. It is a world's fair done in miniature. More than a hundred small-scale models of things that you have seen or wanted to see. From the Government, from great industrial companies and from amateur model makers, who work at home, these ingenious and interesting models have come.

See the handsome replicas of the Isle de France, the Rex, the Bremen, the Aquatania and other ocean greyhounds; not to mention the river boats, sailing craft and battleships. Thrill at the models of America's crack trains. Learn the history of aviation through the exhibit of historic planes.

There will be a model planetarium from which you can study the heavens; a miniature circus parade that has won national acclaim; a small reproduction of a set used in Greta Garbo's new picture; small refineries, farms, mines and gardens. You will see interesting types of architecture and home decoration, all fashioned with infinite care.

These are just a few of the treats that await you. We believe that St. Louis will enthuse over its first Miniature Exposition. We believe that it is the first show of its type that has ever been held in the United States. Come early because we know that you will stay long. And don't forget to bring the children to this unique, interesting and educational exposition. It opens tomorrow at 9 A. M.

DENIES IRELAND HEADS MERRILY TOWARD RUIN

Dublin Paper Thinks London
Post Views Country With
"Jaundiced Eye."

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Sept. 10.—The Irish Times has taken issue with a description in a London newspaper of the Irish as a race merrily headed toward Communism, bankruptcy and economic ruin to the all-too-familiar tune of revolver shots.

The Times used the heading "The Jaundiced Eye" over an editorial taking strong exception to a series of articles written by a correspondent for the London Morning Post, rock-ribbed conservative newspaper.

The series described the Free State as "cheerfully, gladly and admittedly heading for bankruptcy, ruin and Communism." The Statist farmers, the special article said, were hanging on the ropes gasping for breath, while "in the fields and in the street revolvers are discharged as regularly as the clock goes round. The citizen, injured by long familiarity, neither pauses nor turns about."

The writer painted a sorry picture of a country shunned by tourists, where automobiles are a "comparative rarity." Dublin, the series said, "bears less outward evidence of luxury than the average English market town."

The Times' Reply.
The Times, pointing out that it is a "strong and convinced supporter of the British connection" in the Free State, declared, "We have our faults in this island, but it is grossly unfair to depict us as a race of semi-savages who live by the rule of the gun."

It added, "There is no doubt that the Free State at the moment is in a condition of some economic distress, for which it has nobody but its own Government to blame; but the suggestion that it is plunging headlong towards Communism is sheer nonsense."

"Furthermore, we are glad to say that we have noticed no sign of revolver shooting recently. Possibly young men have arms; but the Free State is as safe for the tourist or the citizen as any other country in the world."

"As for the absence of luxury, we wonder if the visiting correspondent ever saw the cinema queues in Dublin? In point of fact, there is far too much luxury in Dublin, which, we venture to say, spends more money on amusement than any dozen English market towns put together."

The Times also took strong exceptions to the Post's assertion that the Protestant in the Free State is the "subject of suspicion and antagonism," living mainly on sufferance, and in isolated instances the "subject of the Irish boycott, the power of which, beyond the borders of the Free State, is hard to conceive."

Commenting on the status of the protestants as "a tiny minority in a predominantly Roman Catholic country," the Times said:

"We do not deny that on occasions there may have been isolated instances of intolerance, just as there are isolated instances of the same kind of thing in every other country."

"We do deny, however, with the greatest possible emphasis, that the Protestants in the Free State have the slightest cause for complaint. On the contrary, they are living in peace and friendship among their Roman Catholic neighbors. They hold positions of high honor in the land."

A. F. L. HEAD TELLS PRINTERS
THEIR UNION HAS LED THE WAY

Green Says They Have Pioneered in Social Welfare Measures as Well as in Organization.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in an address at the World's Fair last night said union labor had made two distinct gains under the National Industrial Recovery Act, namely, legal recognition of workers' rights to organize and bargain collectively and the setting up of agencies to make the right effective.

Green addressed the convention of the International Typographical Union. His talk was broadcast.

He told the printers they had pioneered not only in union organization, but also in social welfare work by providing care for the aged and sick, and in other measures. He said the nation now "is considering following along the path the union blazed."

HITLER DECLARES STORM TROOPERS ARE HERE TO STAY

Says 'Only Crazy Man or Deliberate Liar Could Think I Ever Dreamed of Dissolving' Them.

By the Associated Press.
NURNBERG, Germany, Sept. 10.—The Nazis' political soldiers—the brown shirted storm troops and the black shirted Schutz Staffel—have come to stay, Adolf Hitler said at the Nazis' annual party congress here yesterday.

"Only a crazy man or a deliberate liar," he exclaimed, "can think that I or anybody else ever dreamed of dissolving what we ourselves built up."

Applauding their leaders' words were 127,000 storm troops picked from all Germany and 12,000 of the Schutz Staffel, tall, smart troops chosen primarily to serve as body guards.

"Hell Hitler" greeted the Chancellor as he appeared at the Luitpold arena.

Thereafter the Nazis' troops marched three miles to the center of this medieval town to pass in review before their leader, standing on Adolf Hitler Platz. For four and one-half hours the soldiers marched past Hitler, under the midday blistering sun.

Recalls June 30 Killings.

Hitler minced no words as he recalled the killings of June 30, when Capt. Ernst Roehm, Storm Troop chieftain, and others high in the ranks of that organization, accused of treason, were slain or committed suicide.

"I decided to call you (to Nurnberg) for a special reason," Hitler said.

"Several months ago a black shadow fell over our movement. Many opponents thought the time had come for our movement to collapse.

"I've summoned you for three reasons:

"First, to demonstrate that the storm troops had just as little to do with this shadow as any other instrument of the party;

"Second, to show everybody that my relation to you, my comrades, is exactly the same as it always has been, and;

"Third, to serve notice on our enemies that the Sturm Abteilung (Storm Troops) and the Schutz Staffel now as ever stand forth as the guarantors of the National Socialist revolution.

"There never has been any rift in the structure of our movement. It stands firm as the block of granite from which I'm addressing you. "Anyone who wins against the spirit or the meaning of the storm troops—my storm troops—doesn't strike at the movement but at himself and against himself. Let no one dare offer resistance to this, the mightiest organization in history!"

Thousands Cheer Hitler.

A roar of cheers from the uniformed Nazi organizations and the hundreds of thousands of spectators punctuated Hitler's every sentence as he spoke.

Before his address Hitler performed the now customary rite of walking with the chiefs of staff of both armies to the memorial to war dead. After speaking, he personally chose 126 storm troop and 75 Schutz Staffel banners, each representing one regiment, to touch Nazism's sacred relic, the blood-stained flag of Hitler's 1923 "beer cellar putsch" at Munich.

SCHOONER RIDES OUT BLOW, JAMES ROOSEVELT ABOARD

'Nothing to Be Worried About,' Says President's Son on Arrival at Portland, Me.

By the Associated Press.
PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 10.—The 50-foot racing schooner, Black Arrow, with James Roosevelt, son of the President, and a crew of amateur sailors aboard, put into Portland harbor last night after being buffeted for 24 hours by a storm off New England. Coast Guard vessels had been looking for the Black Arrow, under orders of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

"There was nothing to be worried about," Roosevelt said. "The Black Arrow is sound as a church. We just had a little blow and we have to. It was mighty disagreeable and uncomfortable, but at no time were we in any danger."

President Roosevelt telephoned his son from Hyde Park, N. Y., as soon as he learned of his arrival here.

George W. Knowlton of West Upton, Mass., owner of the Black Arrow, and two sons also were aboard the vessel when it left Manchester, Mass., Saturday in a race with 29 others. All but four turned back as a storm arose.

THRETE HELD FOR SELLING HARD LIQUOR WITHOUT LICENSE.

Plain clothes officers, accompanied by policemen, visited the Blue Lantern, 22 North Commercial street, early yesterday and arrested H. J. Zinzen, the proprietor, and two bartenders after being served gin and whisky, according to their report. The establishment has only a 32 beer license, the officers reported.

Saturday night the same officers arrested Sidney Gates, operator of a tavern at 325 De Baliviere avenue, where, they reported, gin was served without a license.

Red Cross Head Decorated.

ACQUITTED OF MURDER, IDENTIFIED IN HOLDUP

By the Associated Press.
NEVADA, Mo., Sept. 10.—Virgil (Blackie) Wells, who was acquitted July 3 of the murder of Mrs. E. Pearl Dancy, whose body was found in her automobile in a cemetery, was shot and arrested by officers early today on a first degree robbery charge.

Abraham Pow and Carl McCown, city officers, said Dr. J. L. Sparks identified Wells as the man who robbed him of $18 and his automobile a week ago.

The officers recognized Wells in a taxicab, they called for Wells to surrender, but the driver, Chester McFall, drove away and a chase which lasted for 10 blocks began. Pow and McCown fired three shots at the machine, the third shot striking a tire. Wells jumped out of the machine and ran. Pow shot him in the right ankle and he surrendered. The taxicab driver also was arrested and charged with aiding and abetting a fugitive.

TWO KILLED IN AUTO RACES

By the Associated Press.
JACKSON, Mich., Sept. 10.—Adrian Johnson, 33-year-old automobile racer, of Bryan, O., was killed at the Fair Grounds track here yesterday when his car crashed into another during a consolation race. The impact threw Johnson to the track and two other cars passed over him.

By the Associated Press.
WEST CHESTER, Pa., Sept. 10.—Thurman Wimberly, 28 years old, of Philadelphia, was killed yesterday in a crash in the 15-mile feature event of the automobile races on the dirt track at the Chester County fair. The races were for old, rickety cars. One machine stalled in the middle of the track, and Wimberly, rounding a curve, rammed into it. In one of the earlier races, Leland Shores, 23, of Milltown, suffered a skull injury when his car overturned on a curve.

“Did you create Old Golds especially for people with sensitive throats?”

Dolores Del Rio

Star of Warner Bros. Picture
“Madame Du Barry”

Dolores Del Rio, often referred to as “the most exquisitely dressed woman in Hollywood”

Dear Miss Del Rio:

Our aim, when we created Old Golds, was simply to produce a smoother cigarette than America had ever known before . . .

A cigarette that would appeal to everyone by reason of its mellow mildness—its freedom from rasp and bite.

The tobaccos used in Old Gold are free from artificial flavoring and other seasonings. Hence the throat-ease . . . without any irritation even for the most sensitive throat.

Sincerely,
P. LORILLARD COMPANY, INC.
ESTABLISHED 1760

P. S.—Another outstanding reason is this, Miss Del Rio:—No better tobacco grows than is used in Old Gold. And it's pure. That's why Old Golds are easy on the THROAT and NERVES.

COST OF NEW DEAL
SMALL, RICHBERG
SAYS; GAIN GREAT

Expenditures Have Been Less Than for One Year of World War, He Reports to Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Making his last report to President Roosevelt on results of the New Deal, Donald Richberg, secretary of the executive council, said yesterday the cost was "a small price to pay for a great gain."

"You may take profound satisfaction in your leadership and in the achievements of your administration," Richberg said. He added that the record was one "of many difficulties and some disappointment, but on the whole of great achievement."

"The nation has risen out of the depths of its worst depression," Richberg said, "and is moving steadily forward in the process of a definite economic recovery and is building new defenses against a recurrence of economic ills from which it has been suffering."

"The money expended in these great constructive efforts is, of course, far less than the cost of one year of participation in the World War, with its vast destruction of life and property. It has been a small price to pay for a great gain."

Richberg said 15,000,000 applications to national and state employment services within the last 12 months indicated the magnitude of the unemployment problem, and added "it is natural to feel disappointment that there have not been greater reductions in unemployment."

"On the other hand," he said, "the achievements of one year are clearly evident, although only partially measured by these facts."

"Over 4,000,000 workers have been re-employed in private enterprises. Over 4,000,000 others have been given temporary public employment."

"Over 675,000 have been employed during part of the year on permanent public works."

"Farm prices of seven basic commodities have been raised within the year to 95 per cent of pre-war parity and total farm income has increased far more than one billion dollars."

"Over five billion dollars have been disbursed in loans and grants to relieve the financial distress of individuals and institutions, of which over two billion dollars have been already repaid."

"The banking system of the nation has been restored to health. More than 1,000,000 farm and city homes have been saved from foreclosure by aid already extended or under way."

"The final instalment of Richberg's report to Roosevelt was in three parts. The first dealt with advances in public services, the second with administrative services and the last with the promotion of foreign trade."

Among administrative services, Richberg said "has performed successfully the relief, recovery and reconstruction programs," in addition to other tasks. Among public service advances

Richberg listed the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Communications Commission and the Co-ordinator of Transportation. He said Joseph B. Eastman, the co-ordinator, was preparing a legislative program for the next Congress on the basis of his investigations into steam railroads.

On foreign trade, Richberg said: "The stimulation of foreign trade is especially pertinent to the efforts of the AAA to bring about a sound agricultural economy."

Richberg referred to the "adjustment of economic conflicts," noting that "as might have been anticipated from previous experiences, the period of economic recovery has been a period of an increase in the number of labor controversies and in the difficulty of their adjustment."

"Great Strides in Industry." "It can be fairly said, by way of summary, that in the program of economic recovery, great strides have been made in providing the means for the establishment of industrial law and order and the means of a nation-wide co-operation in the promotion and stabilization of trade and industry," he said.

"A great advance has also been made under the codes of fair competition in enabling business men to plan their operations so that the business enterprises of the nation may serve more faithfully in meeting the economic needs of the nation."

Another administrative service stressed by Richberg was the Treasury, which he said "has performed successfully the relief, recovery and reconstruction programs," in addition to other tasks. Among public service advances

Richberg referred to the "adjustment of economic conflicts," noting that "as might have been anticipated from previous experiences, the period of economic recovery has been a period of an increase in the number of labor controversies and in the difficulty of their adjustment."

DEMOCRATS HOLD
65 PCT. OF STATE
HIGHWAY JOBS

Canvass, It Is Learned, Fails to Bear Out Assertion That Republicans Predominate.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch. JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 10.—A political poll of the Missouri State Highway Department, ordered by Gov. Park, which is being completed by members of the bi-partisan State Highway Commission, will show at least 65 per cent of the 3000 department employees are Democrats, it is learned today.

The commission, which is in session here today, soon will prepare a combined report on the poll—the first ever made by the commission in the 13 years the Highway Department, as now constituted, has been in existence, and will transmit it to the Governor.

Gov. Park ordered the poll of the Highway Department—which is supposed to be non-political—several weeks ago. This action followed numerous protests by Democratic politicians that a majority of the department employees were Republicans, and should be replaced by Democrats.

The poll does not bear out the charges, but indicates good progress has been made in a move, started soon after the Democratic administration took office early in 1933, to place additional Democrats in the department.

Baker's Request Refused. Until the present administration, the Highway Commission repeatedly refused to make a political poll of the department employees, taking the position the road-building organization was not political, that politics should not figure in selection of its employees, and that a classification of the employees, as to their political affiliations, would be prejudicial to a proper performance of department duties.

An attempt to poll the employees was made by one commission member in 1925, shortly before his term expired, after the commission as a body had refused a request of the late Gov. Baker that such a poll be made. The information gained in this canvass was not of much value to politicians requesting it, as a large number of the employees classed themselves as independent in politics or did not report after the commission had notified them they were not required to furnish the information.

In the present poll, officially supervised by the Commissioners, the employees were called on to designate themselves as Democrats or Republicans. The department has about 2000 regular employees and about 1000 employees classed as temporary ones.

The work of supervising the poll was divided among the four Commissioners, each taking two or three of the 10 construction divisions of the department. The Commissioners are Scott Wilson (Dem.) of St. Louis, chairman; Dulaney Mahan (Dem.) of Hannibal; Arthur T. Nelson (Rep.) of Lebanon, and H. B. Pyle (Rep.) of St. Joseph.

Contractor's Claim Held Up. Chairman Wilson said today the commission would take no action at this meeting on the pending request of Boyle & Pryor, a Kansas City contracting firm, for payment of a balance of about $70,000 on two State highway contracts, which was refused by the commission about a year ago.

Payment of the balance, amounting to about 25 per cent, was withheld by the commission after an investigation of an award of the contracts without advertising for bids, as required by law, at prices alleged to involve excessive profits.

Half of the personnel of the commission has changed since the investigation was made and the payment of the balance was refused. Of the two commissioners who forced an investigation, William F. Phares (Rep.) of Maryville, and R. S. Brownlee (Dem.) of Brookfield, Phares resigned and Brownlee was not reappointed by Gov. Park when his term expired last December.

It is understood formal commission action on the petition of Boyle & Pryor for payment of the balance may not be taken until after the November election.

MORE THAN A MILLION A DAY IN AAA CORN-HOG PAYMENTS

Missouri Farmers Had Received $6,859,341 Sept. 4; $1,255,660 to Illinois.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The Farm Administration is paying $1,000,000 a day to farmers co-operating in the corn-hog adjustment program.

In August farmers received $37,077,320 on their adjustment contracts. Dr. A. G. Black, chief of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's corn-hog section, said 423,000 checks were issued. Approximately $80,473,000 had been paid to more than 637,500 farmers Sept. 7, representing nearly one-half of the estimated first instalment of $133,000,000 to be paid to the 1,200,000 farmers who have signed contracts. Payments through Sept. 4 included:

Arkansas, $23,022; Illinois, $1,255,660; Iowa, $18,859,929; Missouri, $6,859,341. The Illinois payments include $6639 in Madison County. The Missouri payments include $18,882 in St. Louis County, $15,717 in St. Charles County.

5 ASK FOR CHANGE OF VENUE ON 'TREASON CODE' CHARGE

Nine Other Illinois Defendants Expected to Join in Motion.

Five of the 14 men indicted in Montgomery County under the Illinois "treason code" filed a petition for a change of venue Saturday, alleging that they could not obtain an impartial trial at Hillsboro. Their attorneys said the other defendants probably would join in the motion. All but two of the men have been released on bond. Still in jail at Hillsboro are John Lapshanski and Carl Gerulla, both of Nokomis. They were arrested last June 2 after a series of "relief demonstrations" in the county, which resulted in the issuance of the "treason code" warrants.

INSURANCE SALESMAN SHOOTSELF TO DEATH

John W. Cook Jr., 27, Had Been in Poor Health — Wife Finds Body.

John W. Cook Jr., 27-year-old insurance salesman, shot and killed himself early yesterday in his father's home at 222 Spencer road, Webster Groves. A relative said he had been in poor health.

He left three sealed notes addressed to his mother, father and wife. His body, with a bullet wound under the heart and a .45-caliber automatic pistol near by, was found by his wife, who was awakened by the shot at about 12:30 a. m. She said she had seen him looking at a pistol in his father's bedroom earlier in the night and had persuaded him to go to bed.

In the note to his wife, read to Coroner Tipton at an informal hearing today, he said he was "sorry I could not make a go of married life," and suggested she enter the insurance business.

They had been occupying his parents' home while the parents were on vacation in Canada. Their home was at 807 Clara avenue.

Cook, a graduate of Country Day School and a former Washington University student, was employed by the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. His father is vice-president of F. D. Hirschberg & Co., an insurance agency. He was married in June, 1932, in an elopement to Belleville. His widow is the former Miss Frankie Ritter of Washington, Mo., daughter of Alfred L. Ritter, retired merchant. He is survived also by a sister, Miss Virginia Leigh Cook.

MORE CHARGES FILED IN TRUTH CENTER ROW

The Rev. Emil C. Hartmann Replies to Suit of Brother and Sister.

Counter-charges in the dispute over control of the St. Louis Truth Center, Inc., 4030 Lindell boulevard, were filed today in Circuit Court by the Rev. Emil C. Hartmann.

In an answer and cross-bill to the suit filed last March by his brother and sister, the Rev. Charles H. Hartmann and Miss Catherine P. Hartmann, charging him with faulty management and asking for an accounting, he declared they attempted to gain control of the center for their financial gain.

They held trustees' meetings in his absence and at one of them passed a resolution instructing the Truth Center's bank to honor checks only on signature of two officers, so that the corporation's funds now are tied up and it is unable to meet its bills, he alleged.

Denying their charges he had resigned as president last September but refused to vacate the property, he declared they had disregarded their duties as trustees and officers and left the burden of carrying on the center's work to him. He said he never had drawn a salary or gained financially from the center and had given his personal resources to it.

The court was requested in the cross-bill to dissolve the corporation and to appoint a board of trustees to take over the property and run it for the benefit of the Truth Center organization. A temporary receiver was asked for.

Persons Thrown Two and Three Stories in Accident at Chicago.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Twenty-five persons were injured yesterday, when the back porches and stairs of a building from which they had been watching a football game collapsed, throwing them two and three stories to the ground in a heap of wreckage.

About 300 had gathered on the porches and roof of the building, a three-story structure across the alley from the field in which the Chicago Bears were playing the Chicago Tigers. As the game neared its end, those on the roof began jumping to the upper porch, which gave way beneath them.

RIVER TENT-DWELLER SLAIN

Said to Have Resisted Robbery Attempt at Hayti, Mo.

By the Associated Press.
HAYTI, Mo., Sept. 10.—Oce Cravens, 46 years old, a riverman, was shot and killed in his tent on the Mississippi River bank near here Saturday night.

Officers are seeking two youths who had been in the Cravens tent earlier in the evening. Cravens' son, according to officers, told them the youths started a dice game in which he and his father participated. The elder Cravens resisted an attempt to rob him of his winnings and was shot, the son said.

TELLS GRAND JURY
TO BE IN SESSION
ON ELECTION DAYJudge Hartmann Directs It to Take Immediate Action on Complaints of Fraud at Polls.

Circuit Judge Hartmann, delivering his instructions today to the new September grand jury, directed the body to remain in session on election day, Nov. 6, and to take immediate action on any complaints of illegal voting or registration fraud.

The September grand jury will remain in session until the first week of December.

"The court charges you," the instructions read, "to be in session on election day, and with the assistance of the Circuit Attorney, to give every consideration to complaints of election frauds indictable under the laws of our State."

"Information may come to you from reliable sources that election frauds and illegal registration are being perpetrated. Should testimony of this character be presented, you will diligently investigate such charges and indict those guilty of election frauds, without fear or delay."

"While the responsibility of maintaining an absolutely honest election rests principally with the judges and clerks of election, yet it becomes your duty, as members of the grand jury, to assist the judges and clerks by your co-operation and prompt action."

The other instructions were of routine character.

Otto L. Swanzey, 928 Belleview boulevard, president of Shelton Hat Co., was appointed foreman of the grand jury. The other members were:

Edward A. Bokern, 2931 Allen avenue, of R. E. Bokern Real Estate Co.

Herbert L. Glaser, 4938 Bancroft avenue, assistant treasurer of Tower Grove Bank.

William J. Holdaway, 2940 Shaw boulevard, proprietor of William J. Holdaway Real Estate Co.

Dr. Lorenz E. Lehmberg, 3447 South Grand boulevard, dentist.

Birch O. Mahaffey, 9 Portland place, president of Silurian Oil Co.

Harold W. Simpkins, 41 Kingsbury place, treasurer of the Mallinckrodt Chemical Works.

Gug A. Wright, 4950 Lindell boulevard, president of the Thomas Wright Investment Co.

John W. Morrison, 5296 Westminster place, of R. W. Morrison Construction Co.

Arthur L. DuBard, 3515 Crittenden street, St. Louis Superintendent of Prudential Life Insurance Co.

William Knollman, 4033A Fair avenue, vice-president of Knollman Co. (paper).

Ley P. Rexford, 4757 Westminster place, broker.

Two alternates were selected to serve when regular members of the grand jury are unable to attend. They are: Walter S. Haase, 3523 Longfellow boulevard, president of A. C. L. Haase Fish Co., and John M. Robertson, 275 Union boulevard, president of Planters Realty Co.

HUEY LONG'S CANDIDATE FOR SUPREME COURT DIES

Justice Winston Overton Succumbs
Two Days Before Louisiana Election.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 10.—Justice Winston Overton of the Louisiana Supreme Court died last night. He was 63 years old. He was a candidate to succeed himself in tomorrow's Democratic primary and was supported by United States Senator Huey P. Long's organization.

Speaking over the radio last night, Long mentioned the death and said:

"I have been busy looking up the law on the subject and was surprised to find a complete hiatus in the law. It doesn't cover the case at all. It looks like a new election will have to be called by the committee, or the Legislature will have to pass a law providing for a new election."

Others declared the primary law provides that when a candidate died within seven days of an election his opponent in a two-man race was declared the nominee of the party.

ST. MICHAEL'S FAVORITE FOR FAIRMOUNT FEATURE TODAY

SMITH, WINNER OF TWO RACES OPENING DAY, TO HAVE MOUNT

By Dent McSkimming.

In view of the drastic penalty handed R. G. Cooper for foul riding in the fifth race on opening day, it may reasonably be expected that the riders at Fairmount Park will be cautious about using unfair tactics. Cooper, the steward announced, was seen to grab the saddle cloth or other equipment of the horse Heavy Sugar as the latter squeezed through on the rail at the head of the stretch. He was suspended for the rest of the meeting, which means that instead of being in position to earn $150 or more a week for the next month he will have to restrict his labors and his income to those of exercise boy.

Whether it is actually the case or not, this prompt and heavy penalty probably will be attributed to the presence in the stewards' stand of C. W. Hay, who is acting in an official capacity as representative of the Illinois Racing Commission. Hay is an owner and breeder of horses and is general manager of Washington Park track at Chicago. The presiding steward here is John T. Ireland. Cooper's suspension will likely cause some apprehension in the jockeys' quarters.

Today's program is made up of claiming races, the feature position being given over to a sprint in which the claiming price is $900. With little Fred Smith in the saddle, the mare St. Mica will have an edge over the others which may prove the winning factor. Smith's riding was one of the brightest features of Saturday's racing. He won with Miss Mascara and Barclay Sweep, and had a second and a third.

E. E. Watson, the veterinary who has enjoyed remarkable success in rebuilding broken down horses, sends the star of his stable, Principio, to the post in the fourth race, and stands a fine chance of winning the purse. In five starts this year, Principio has won three races, finished second once and fourth another time, never beaten worse than a single length for the purse.

Mount Vernon Beats Edgemont In Title Battle

Mount Vernon won the first half championship of the Missouri-Illinois Trolley League yesterday afternoon at Edgemont, defeating Ray Bease's Edgemont Blue Jays, 6 to 1. Lee Rhodes, Mount Vernon pitcher, held the East St. Louisans to four hits. The losers' run came in the fourth inning on a single, error and sacrifice hit. Mount Vernon in collected a total of 12 hits. Eleven of that number were chalked up against Al Lange, who lasted but four innings. Johnny Harshany replaced Lange and held the victors to one hit during the remainder of the contest.

Williams, first baseman, and McLaughlin, second sacker, for the victors, starred at the plate. Each collected three hits in four attempts. Rowton, shortstop for Edgemont, led his team's offense, with two hits, one double, and one single. One of the largest crowds to witness a baseball attraction at Edgemont this season, estimated at 3000, attended.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—A picture of nationally famous bankers and business men, guided by expert counsel, crawling through the loop holes of American and Canadian laws to escape payment of income taxes was painted in detail in the Senate Banking and Currency Subcommittee's fourth report on its long-continued investigation, made public today.

The latest installment of the committee's report is titled "Income Tax Avoidance" and is a recapitulation of the testimony that made headlines under the shrewd guidance of Ferdinand Pecora, the committee counsel, who is now a member of the Federal Stock Exchange Commission. Much shorter than the previous chapters of the report, it gives the typical schemes used during the depression years to reduce or entirely eliminate income tax payments.

Unlike the other chapters it has virtually no conclusions other than the latest tax laws, as the result of the committee's disclosures, have done many of the loop holes.

The evidence presented to the Senate subcommittee, the report said, "brought to light a variety of methods whereby the payment of income taxes was avoided or deferred until profits were more or less offset by losses. These disclosures laid the basis for legislative action designed to prevent tax avoidance and to simplify the revenue laws. Many changes have been made in the income tax laws directly aimed at the practices described in this chapter.

The need for reform, either in the law or its method of enforcement, or both, was made abundantly clear when the income tax returns of some of the leaders of American finance for the years since 1929 were examined by the subcommittee. For the year 1929 the partners of J. P. Morgan &amp; Co. collectively paid about $11,000,000 in taxes to the Federal Government. For the year 1930, 17 Morgan partners, including J. P. Morgan, paid no tax and five paid aggregate taxes of about $56,000. For the year 1931 not a single Morgan partner paid any tax. For the year 1932 not a single Morgan partner paid any tax.

For the year 1929 the partners of Kuhn, Loeb &amp; Co. collectively paid about $1,900,000 in taxes. For the year 1930, four Kuhn, Loeb partners, including Otto H. Kahn, paid no tax and four paid aggregate taxes of about $100,000. For the year 1931 six Kuhn, Loeb partners paid no tax and the others paid taxes totaling less than $2000. A similar situation prevailed in 1932.

No Recourse for Government.
The limitations of time prevented the subcommittee from determining how wide-spread this immunity from income tax liability actually was among persons prominent in industry, commerce, and finance. It appears certain, however, that the methods of avoiding or minimizing the amount of tax payable were generally familiar to such persons as could afford to pay for expert advice. When confronted with these devices, the Governmental bureau charged with the duty of collecting taxes and enforcing the law appear to have been helpless to cope with them.

The necessity for changes in the law to curb these methods of avoidance existed for some time, and had the inability to cope with such practices on the part of those Governmental bureaus been revealed, the revenues of the Federal Government would have increased by many millions of dollars. Not until the subject was brought sharply to public attention by the revelations before the subcommittee were serious steps taken to close the loopholes.

The committee experts who wrote the report found that the most prevalent form of income tax avoidance was through the "pro forma" sale of securities to a relative toward the close of the tax year and a retransfer of the same

LEAGUE HEARS WAR TALK
AT ITS OPENING SESSION

Tension Between Russia and Japan Exceptionally Grave, Benes of Czecho-Slovakia Tells Assembly.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Sept. 10.—The tension between Russia and Japan is exceptionally grave, Edouard Benes, Foreign Minister of Czecho-Slovakia, said at the opening session of the League of Nations Assembly today.

Relations between Japan and China also are the cause of deep concern, he said. If any power were to provoke similar situations in Europe it would lay itself open to direct penalties of the league, or would be forced to assume responsibility for causing an outbreak of a world catastrophe in which it might itself be engulfed, he said.

He hailed the effort to bring Russia into the league as worthy because of the co-operation of Russia conditions in Europe and the world would never quite return to normal.

The World Crisis.
"There can be no denying," Benes declared, "that the world today is passing through a deep-seated crisis comparable with the greatest crisis in the history of mankind has ever known; it is a crisis in ideas, in morals, in religious beliefs; a crisis in world economic affairs; a crisis in internal social and political conditions; and a far-reaching crisis in international relationships with threats of wars and revolutions of all kinds—in short a state of general instability and uncertainty as to what tomorrow has in store for every sphere."

On the league's debit side he placed the state of the disarmament conference, the department of Germany and Japan, the war in the Pacific, the situation in the Far East, and the failure of the world economic conference.

To its credit he placed the increased co-operation from the United States, efforts to bring Russia into the league, settlement of the dispute between Peru and Colombia, and various pacts of friendship and peace.

He pointed to Manchuria, "although the activities of the league have not yielded all the results which might have been expected," Benes said, after a reference to Manchuria, "and although perhaps these happenings have put to the supreme test, there can be no doubt of the lesson to be drawn from them."

They have indeed proved that if in the future any power were to provoke similar events in other parts of the world, for example in Europe, it would inevitably lay itself open to direct sanctions applied by a large number of other members of the league, or else assume the crushing responsibility of having brought about the final disappearance of the league and the outbreak of an unexampled general catastrophe in which it might itself be engulfed.

For us this certitude is not a result to be despised. We are forewarned, and to be forewarned is of the greatest importance, especially in the present state of the world."

Balancing the Books.
Striking the balance between debits and credits he found the result not discouraging for the league. The league was still a force with which the world could not dispense, he declared. Its continued weakening, or its disappearance, would bring the international organization of the world into complete chaos. The door would be thrown wide open to upheavals, revolutions and violent conflict of every kind, he said.

This profit would have been $95,000. The report indicated but did not say that no tax was paid.

Albert H. Wiggin, former head of the Chase National Bank, also used American and Canadian corporations for tax purposes. He also used domestic personal holding companies to postpone profits until they could be used to offset losses in subsequent years.

The report told in detail how William Ewing, formerly of St. Louis and now a partner in J. P. Morgan &amp; Co., created trusts for his children and thereby postponed the payment of taxes on profits he made by short sales of Johns-Manville securities. An interesting side-line of this transaction was that Ewing was able to sell short a "Morgan" stock, although it was against the rule of the bankers to do this. In this instance, however, Ewing acted as a trustee. That was his testimony. The profit on the transaction was $447,851.

Stock "Lent to Them."
"The money," the report said, "received by Ewing as a trustee, from the short sales was immediately placed to the credit of his own and his wife's account with J. P. Morgan & Co. as security for the loan of stock made by them to Ewing as trustee. Thus the funds were as effectively made available for their use as if they had sold the stock and realized the profit."

every kind, he said. "There are doubtless many destructive forces at present at work in the public life of the world," Benes continued, "and they are acting with extraordinary violence and energy. They are, however, being opposed and neutralized by positive beneficial forces and tendencies which are no less energetic and effective."

The first and most important of these vital forces is the league itself, the effort it is making, the ties it has established between the nations—ties which cannot be broken without difficulty. We may frankly admit that in some cases the league was not strong enough to prevent errors or misfortunes, but it nevertheless remains an indestructible force, an insurmountable barrier to the powers of darkness.

Means of Preventing War.
"I am aware that certain circles from time to time express the fear that war will break out. Some even think that war is perhaps in the air, and is hanging directly over our heads. When I reflect again on what I have just stated, and the experiences we have gained since the last war, I believe that even if these fears can to some extent be explained by the present situation, it is none the less true that war is no sense today an ineluctable fatalism, that responsible men and those who guide the world today now possess to a greater extent than ever before the appropriate means to prevent it, that it is more than ever necessary to proclaim to the world that responsibility for a war falls on the men who are responsible in their respective countries, and that we should have the courage to say so, unhesitatingly; and to ruthlessly insist on this responsibility."

Benes said he felt, however, that the present period of internal and political, economic and social upheavals in a large number of states would be probably protracted, and that consequently "the entire present generation will be condemned to witness a long and painful struggle for the slow progressive reconstruction of the present-day economic and social system."

Richard Sandler of Sweden was elected president of the League Assembly.

Backed by France, England and Italy, an invitation for Russia to enter the League was directed among the delegates and it was stated that some 30 countries were disposed to sign it. If favorable action is taken on the question of giving Russia a permanent seat in the League Council, it is planned that the invitation will be dispatched to Moscow.

If Russia consents, the signatories to the invitation will then ask the assembly to make a resolution in favor of the admission of Russia.

Arthur Henderson, president of the Disarmament Conference, and Louis Barthou, French Foreign Minister, agreed last evening that the convention of the conference would be futile until early November.

Their decision, reached on the eve of the opening of the assembly of the League, definitely removed disarmament from the program of important international political questions to be considered by the assembly.

The assembly voted formally to accept the task of examining into the case in the Chaco Boreal between Paraguay and Bolivia.

The report indicated but did not say that no tax was paid.

PETAIN TELLS GERMANY
WAR IS NOT A VIRTUEFrench War Minister Speaks at Marne and Lafayette On-niversary Celebration.

MEUX, France, Sept. 10.—Marshal Petain, French Minister of War, yesterday asked Germany to remember that "war is not a virtue in itself."

The War Minister spoke at the twin celebration of two French anniversaries, those of the battle of the Marne and the birth of Lafayette.

After tracing the history of the battle of the Marne, one of the World War's decisive conflicts, Marshal Petain said:

"It may be thought that her dead, who sleep here at the side of so many of ours, may remind Germany that war is not a virtue in itself and that humanity, after so many hardships suffered in war, aspires only to heal its wounds, to labor in order to find its well-being and to create a lasting peace."

MORE CHINESE AND JAPANESE
LEAVING U. S. THAN ENTERINGEconomic Reasons Given for Turn of Immigration Tide Toward Orient.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10.—That the migration tide has turned and now is flowing strongly toward the Orient apparently is indicated by the record of arrivals and departures of Asiatics for the year at Pacific Coast ports, the doors of entry for the greater part of the Oriental races.

More than twice as many Chinese left the United States as entered since last Jan. 1. Only 891 entered, as compared to 2039 departures for the first seven months.

Chinese business interests here attribute the outboard movement chiefly to economic conditions. "Many Chinese," an official of the Chinese Six Companies said, "have found it difficult to find work in this country the last year or two, but in increasing numbers they have obtained jobs in China."

Only 3015 Japanese left the United States, compared to 2156 who entered. Greater economic prosperity in Japan is given as the explanation.

ACTION ON STATE
PLATFORMS SET
FOR TOMORROWRepublicans Expected to Make Pendergast and Roosevelt New Deal Missouri Issues.By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 10.—The Roosevelt New Deal and Boss Tom Pendergast of Kansas City will be made the issues of the fall campaign in Missouri in the Republican State platform to be adopted tomorrow in the party's candidates' platform convention.

The Democratic convention, which also will be held tomorrow, will adopt a platform approving the national and State administrations. It will be short, according to the plans of the party leaders, and will contain no reference to the Pendergast organization.

Differences exist among Republican leaders as to the advisability of an attack on President Roosevelt, but Senator Patterson has expressed the opinion that a wide dissatisfaction over the New Deal has developed and that a platform which denounces the national administration's agricultural program, which directs attention to the rapidly mounting public debt, and which proclaims that the Democratic administration is building up a Socialistic Government, will find popular favor.

G. O. P. Campaign Planks.
There is no apparent difference among Republicans as to the advisability of a strong attack on Pendergast. The platform is expected to direct attention to the huge vote polled in Jackson County by the Pendergast-approved candidates in the August primary. The State Democratic administration will be charged with extravagance and criticized for the creation of the State sales tax.

Senator Patterson, former Lieutenant-Governor Winter and Judge Laurence M. Hyde, nominee for Judge of the Supreme Court, have prepared a draft of the Republican platform and it probably will be adopted by the convention without material changes.

Several tentative drafts of a Democratic platform have been prepared, but none so far has been approved by the principal candidates.

Witness in Munitions Inquiry

L. L. DRIGGS
OF Driggs Ordnance Co. before Senate Committee at Washington.
He presented a cablegram, which was put into the evidence, saying the King of England intervened through Polish Ambassador in London because a British firm also wanted the contract. The contract has not as yet been awarded.

It will be devoted to praise of the national and State administration, probably in general terms. It is virtually certain that both parties will shy away from the public utility issues. Gov. Park said today he would not ask that the Democratic counties approve his public utility bills which were defeated by the Democratic Senate last winter, and would not ask that the party pledge itself to enact legislation permitting municipalities to build utilities under the favorable terms of the measures he advocated.

Committee Chairmen.

The new Democratic and Republican State Committees will be organized tomorrow morning and new chairmen will be elected. James P. Aylward of Kansas City will be the Democratic chairman and T. W. Hukriede of Warrenton, a former Republican chairman and former United States Marshal in St. Louis, will be chosen to head the Republican committee unless at the last moment Senator Patterson, Dr. E.

SAYS TWO NATIONS
HAD AN ARMS RACE
DURING ARMISTICEWitness at Senate Inquiry
Tells of Purchases by Colombia and Peru in Leticia Truce.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Testimony that Peru and Colombia engaged in an armament race during their armistice in the Leticia trouble so as to be prepared for war at the end of the truce was given today to the Senate Munitions Committee. The armistice, which terminated five months ago, led to peace, however.

A. J. Miranda Jr., president of the American Armament Corporation, told of the race to build up their armies.

Previous testimony had brought out that Colombia was keeping closely informed on the purchase by Peru of planes in the United States during the armistice.

Miranda said he knew of nothing in the armistice arrangement to prevent the Governments from arming themselves for expected eventualities.

British Sale of War Stocks.
Evidence that the British War Office is disposing of surplus war stocks of such magnitude that the sale of even a part of these munitions could alter the balance of power in a small country, was presented to the committee.

This testimony came to light in a letter by the Sole Armament Co., Ltd., of London, to the American Armament Corporation, saying it acted as agent for the British War Office in disposing of small arms worth about $30,000,000.

"The stocks we control," the letter said, "are of such magnitude that the sale of a big block of them could alter the political balance of power of the smaller states, involving corresponding complications from the point of view of finance and industry."

Evidence that Miranda, while in Rio de Janeiro on May 27, 1933, boasted the American commercial and military attaches there had been "100 per cent helpful" was given to the committee.

Miranda, president of the American Armament Corporation, and F. H. Sweetser and Maj. H. M. Brant, already had disclosed that the Benefits of Permanent Registration.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE Junior Chamber of Commerce is making an investigation of our present registration system to ascertain how it can add to the convenience of the voter, curtail registration costs and, most important of all, decrease the possibility of voting frauds. It has been said that our present laws are adequate in all of these essentials. What are the facts in the matter?

Under a system of permanent registration, residents register but once for all time. In the apartment sections, where numerous transfers are made, removals can be taken care of by notifications from the telephone, gas and electric companies, and can be consummated by mail. The right to vote is a fundamental right, and there is no logical reason by anyone should be put to unnecessary trouble to exercise that right.

From data we have received from other cities, we are certain that our registration costs are far too high. We have an average annual registration cost of 58 cents per registered voter in St. Louis. The average annual cost of cities having a permanent registration system is only 17.4 cents per registered voter.

Detroit, under a system similar to ours, had an average cost of only 22.5 cents per registered voter, yet in 1932 adopted a system of permanent registration. O. E. Distin, chief supervisor of the Detroit Election Commission, writes us: "It affords a much greater convenience to our citizens, and the reduced cost of registrations over a period of years will be more marked in the future than during the time it was necessary to amortize the cost of installation. In other words, in addition to the facility with which the system may be operated, it will not be necessary to hold a general re-registration every four years, and a saving of over $100,000 for each such re-registration every presidential year will be effected." Already, Detroit's annual cost has dropped to 11.6 cents per registrant.

Obviously, we are spending thousands of dollars unnecessarily annually under an antiquated system. We conservatively estimate that St. Louis could save $100,000 annually, not for one or two years, but perpetually. Think of saving $1,000,000 of the taxpayers' money in 10 years! Others have placed the estimated saving much higher.

But neither added convenience nor a saving in cost is of importance if the system does not prevent voting frauds. Under any system of registration, it is necessary to purge the records and have a systematic investigation at specified intervals. To say that it is necessary to start with new books every four years is to admit that our present system is defective in the matter of checking up on the names registered. Other cities make use of the death reports, the transfer and removal of gas, electric and water connections, removals as reported by moving concerns and a careful house-to-house check. In some cities, such check is carried on by the police.

Admittedly, these devices can be added to our present system. In fact, the need for a thorough purging is as great with quadrennial registration as with permanent registration. If effective means are found to revise the registers during the four-year period, it would seem to be altogether reasonable and logical to make the registration permanent. Cities having permanent registration have a much higher percentage of the eligible voters registered on the books and consequently a larger number of the people vote. It is interesting to note that voting frauds have practically disappeared in cities having permanent registration.

Permanent registration is not new. We can look into the record of cities that have used the system more than 15 years. At present, Boston, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Omaha, Denver, Louisville, Birmingham, Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Portland, Ore., use a system of permanent registration. Cleveland, Cincinnati and Detroit have adopted the system in the last five years and already are enjoying its remarkable benefits. There is no sound reason why St. Louis should be denied these advantages.

FRANKLIN F. WEHRLE,
Chairman of Permanent Registration Committee, Junior Chamber of Commerce.

A Tax on the Poor Man.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE careful listener can hear the steady thumping of a hammer as our local Democratic administration pounds nails into its political coffin. The proposed 2 per cent sales tax will complete the job.

The forgotten man is better off forgotten than to be remembered in this fashion. The sales tax is a tax on the poor man; on his bread and milk and simple necessities. If fear of political pressure from organized blocs led our Aldermen to swing from other sources of revenue to a general sales tax, let them now take warning that the people of St. Louis will not willingly bear the burdens caused by needless political expenditure.

We have not forgotten that Mayor Dickmann restored the 10 cent pay cut of the city employees. Is it for that that we are slipped another card from the bottom of the deck in the "New Deal"?

A NEW PLAN FOR CHOOSING JUDGES.

Multiplicity of candidates, many scarcely known to voters, results frequently in election of unfit men. This flaw in our electoral system is being attacked by the Los Angeles Bar Association, so far as it deals with that district's Superior Court Judges, in a rather novel proposal which will be passed upon by the State's voters at the next general election.

The plan is a combination of appointment and election of Judges, combining the best features of both, its advocates assert. The magistrates would originally be appointed by the Governor, from a list of two or three approved candidates, supplied by the Chief Justice of the California Supreme Court, the Presiding Justice of the District Court of Appeals and the State Senator for the county. At the expiration of the six-year term, the voters could approve or disapprove of the Judge's reappointment, by a yes-and-no ballot. If approved, the Governor would reappoint him; if disapproved, the Governor would designate another man from a list supplied as before.

This procedure, the Bar Association committee points out, would take the judiciary out of politics, while preserving the people's right to pass upon its members. Every incumbent or ballot aspirant would bear the recommendation of competent authorities. Such a condition as 105 candidates on the ballot for 16 or 17 vacancies could no longer occur. "Our courts are terrifically inefficient," says ex-Judge John P. Wood, chairman of the committee, "for, in order to maintain their seats, Judges are obliged to give something like one-third of their time to politics." The judicio-political combination has been widely assailed as contributing to the inefficiency of American courts.

To the complaint that this method would deprive the people of the right of selecting their own Judges, answer is made that the right is not lost, but merely delegated, as occurs in many other functions of democratic government. The people retain the right of judicial recall, or they may retire an unsatisfactory Judge at the end of his term, or vote against the endorsees of one found unfit.

There has been much debate over whether Judges should be elected or appointed. Each method has its obvious drawbacks, and it was the purpose of the California group to avoid the evils of both. Originally planned for the four larger districts of the State (since in smaller areas, it was thought, voters were more likely to know the candidates), the Legislature altered the proposed constitutional amendment to apply only to Los Angeles.

The attack is upon a problem common to the entire country, both as to members of the bench and other officials. The outcome of this sincere effort to bring about a needed reform will be watched with great interest.

"DID STRIKE, PENETRATE AND WOUND."

In an information filed in the Circuit Court of Jackson County, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Hill charges Charles Gargotta with the murder of Ferris Anthon on Aug. 12, 1933. But, in order to make this simple charge in the form made necessary by Missouri procedure, Mr. Hill had to write a sentence about 450 words long. We give a sample of the complicated verbiage:

... and he said Charles Gargotta with the leaden balls aforesaid, out of the pistol aforesaid, then and there by force of the gunpowder aforesaid by the said Charles Gargotta shot off and discharged as aforesaid, then and there, feloniously, wilfully, deliberately, premeditatedly, on purpose and of his malice aforesaid, did strike, penetrate and wound the said Ferris Anthon. . . .

Writing in the Citizens' League Bulletin of Kansas City upon this monstrous piece of verbiage, Frederick E. Whitten says:

Everyone knows that before a leaden ball can kill anyone, it would have to strike him, it would have to wound him, and it would have to penetrate him. Everyone knows also that before a pistol could be used to murder a person, it would have to be shot off, and before it could hurt anyone, it would have to be loaded with balls or some kind of substance propelled by a powder charge.

Mr. Whitten is a lawyer. He thinks it nonsensical to be forced to go on a verbal spree to state a simple charge. So does every sensible person. Yet the law clings to this practice and, upon occasion, when prosecutors have failed to put in all the "aforesaid," criminals have escaped justice.

That is one reason why the movement for reform of criminal procedure is gaining strength every day.

WASHINGTON GOLD BRICKS.

The Senate committee looking into the munitions business has lately put into its record two highly colored letters in which a Washington lobbyist of the Electric Boat Co., builder of submarines, took credit to himself for placing two men on the House Rules Committee and for the passage of the cruiser bill and other legislation. We hold no brief for the munitions makers, but it is pertinent to observe that everybody who knows anything about the ways of lobbyists knows that claims of this sort need to be taken with a very large grain of salt.

The stock-in-trade of the average lobbyist, in building up and maintaining a clientele, is a reputation for being "on the inside." Maybe he is there and maybe he isn't. The chances are 10 to 1 that he isn't. All that he needs in order to attract the gullible is the reputation. To get this, we see him resorting to many and devious devices: angling for invitations to the dinner tables of Washington's dowagers, maneuvering to be seen at luncheon with a Cabinet member or a presidential secretary, and, of course, writing to his clients about his prodigious feats.

A humorous twist was given the Caraway lobby investigation of a few years ago by its disclosure of the thriving business in gold bricks. They are still for sale in Washington in large numbers, and supposedly astute business men are still buying them.

THE FIGHT FOR PERMANENT REGISTRATION.

We commend to our readers Franklin F. Wehrle's letter, which we publish today, on the benefits of permanent registration. Mr. Wehrle fairly states the case and in no wise exaggerates the virtues of a measure desirable from the standpoint of economy, convenience to the voter and safeguard against fraud.

In the last two sessions of the Missouri Legislature, attempts have been made by public-spirited citizens to obtain a permanent registration law for Missouri. They went to Jefferson City with invincible arguments, were met by no open opposition, yet they came back defeated. Their defeat was caused by stupid resistance to change and by the politicians' fear of losing patronage they enjoy under the present costly registration system.

So obviously needed a reform as Senator Norris' lame duck amendment took years to accomplish. Patience and persistence, however, won in the end. These qualities will win permanent registration for Missouri, too. Mr. Wehrle, the Junior Chamber of Commerce and all other organizations who have been fighting for permanent registration should renew the battle at Jefferson City next year.

IN DEFENSE OF THE PROFESSORS.

Many of those who do not like the trend of the Roosevelt policies are prone to blame everything on the professors. Thus, a letter-writer to the New York Times, after commenting on the strange workings of the scarcity theory of recovery and prosperity, inquires: "Who would have dreamed that college professors, when unrestrained, would create such havoc?"

The truth is that the part played by college professors in the present administration has been greatly exaggerated. They have no representative in the Cabinet. Professors had nothing to do with the creation of the Government's greatest lending agency, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which had its genesis under Mr. Hoover. Control of the corporation is in the hands of a hard-bitten business man, Jesse Jones of Texas. Professors did not inspire the compulsory cotton reduction scheme. This was the work of the Bankhead brothers, conservative Democratic politicians of Alabama. Professors had little or no hand in drafting the salient features of the National Industrial Recovery Act. This dates back to the demand of industrial groups for a loosening of the anti-trust laws and to labor's demand for a quid pro quo. The industrialists had their wish, and labor got Section 7A. As for the NRA in operation, it is sufficient to say that Gen. Hugh S. Johnson is not a college professor.

The list of important governmental activities which are wholly or very largely without professorial guidance might be extended, but we turn the floor over to an able champion from the professors' own ranks, Frank A. Fetter of Princeton. In a letter to the New York Times, replying to that from which we have quoted, Prof. Fetter corrects a number of misapprehensions:

Gen. Johnson himself has lately been at great pains in a popular magazine to claim doubtful credit by explaining that he, assisted by a group of practical business men—very practical, for there was not a college professor among them—conceived and drafted the monopolistic features of the NRA. He might have truthfully added that many college professors of economics had long been protesting against the evident purposes of certain influential business interests to put through just such a plan.

In a September magazine, John T. Flynn, himself a severe critic of the policy, confirms Gen. Johnson's view of this detail, with the qualification, however, that one former college professor, not an economist but a corporation lawyer, assisted in the actual drafting of the act. The origin of the bizarre AAA restrictive measures is more obscure, but it seems to have been conceived by a union of organized farmers' groups with political economists, against the protests of most of the academic agricultural economists of national reputation. The paradoxical appointment of a young economist from a great urban university to a high post in the Agricultural Administration, to the surprise of the public mind, but with due regard to his fine aspirations for social reforms, has been distinguished among economists chiefly for his attempt in recent years to throw upon the scrap heap the hard-won methods and truth of economics along with his brother economists that still believe in them.

Those who have been ready to make a convenient scapegoat of college professors can be assured that we have not had a "look-in" when the ostensibly new but really ancient policies of scarcity and special privilege were in the making, although some very good "professors on leave" have been assigned to comparatively minor administrative roles where they can do little but fret and fume against the vagaries of their more "practical" and vocal official superiors.

Let the "practical" men put that in their pipe and smoke it!

RUSSIA BEFORE THE LEAGUE.

The question of the admission of Soviet Russia into the League of Nations caused a deadlock in the Council last week. Apparently the objections of Switzerland, Poland and perhaps several of the smaller members are being seriously debated.

Russia's case for admission can be briefly put. As Dr. Pelham H. Box of the University of London says in his recent history of the country from earliest times: "A constantly pacific foreign policy, based on the creative organization of peace by means of nonaggression pacts with all Powers willing to sign them, and a courageous and definitive lead in the cause of disarmament, have secured for Russia a high standing with all the progressive forces of the world."

At this distance it would seem that the Federal Council of Switzerland is ill-advised to continue opposing Russian admission because of propaganda activities of exiles in Switzerland during the war. Seventeen years is a long time in this changing world, as the course of American post-war relations with Russia reminds us. The meeting of the Assembly finds the League of Nations needing to renew its faith, to take on new heart, to get a firmer grasp on itself and the affairs of the world which come under its jurisdiction. A robust and resourceful yet internationally pacific new member may prove a signal stimulus to that end.

INTEREST IN THE ONE-HOUSE LEGISLATURE.

Senator Norris' campaign for the abolition of Nebraska's two-chamber Legislature and the substitution of a unicameral body of fewer and better paid legislators is causing a revival of interest in this heretofore unsuccessful proposal for reform in the structure of State government. In Ohio, approval of the idea has reached such a point that it now appears probable that it will be submitted to the voters in the form of an amendment to the State Constitution. The Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce initiated the movement and other civic and business groups over the State are getting behind it.

As reported from Cincinnati, the plan is to set up one house with a membership of 54 legislators, each to serve four years and to be paid $5,000 for the term. As under the plan proposed by Nebraska's veteran Senator, this would save the State money and at the same time provide more adequate pay for the State's lawmakers. It begins to look as if the time is ripe for some State which has a flair for political pioneering and which keeps a steady eye on the budget to give the unicameral Legislature a trial.

We may be on our way to Moscow, as Bainbridge Colby says, but Uncle Sam has just refused to lend the comrades $100,000,000. The old tight-wadski.

IT WILL DO THE WORK
OF 200 MEN!

An Indictment of American Colleges

"Mass production of college graduates" has many defects, survey shows; word test discloses seniors as knowing little more than freshmen, director says; assails giving ideas in packages, segregating courses, measuring knowledge by credits; ability to think, not to pass examinations, should be criterion of educational career.

W. M. H. in the Literary Digest.

ONE of the phenomena of the Great Boom was the mass production of college graduates. Under the blazing sun of the prosperity that was to last forever, there developed an enormous popular thirst for higher education, or for its certificates. The result was a rush to Alma Mater resembling a stampede, and the hasty expansion of the educational mill to absorb the grist. On a par with the ideal of two cars in every garage was that of a college degree-holder in every home.

Much the same demand exists today, despite the depression. College and university enrollment has suffered comparatively little from hard times. As in the case of the automobile, one of the last things to be relinquished by the American family in distress has been the ambition of its offspring to be college-bred. The assembly line of culture must still operate with its old precision if it would supply its market.

It is so operating. But in the meantime, it is undergoing some very critical scrutiny, based on the growing doubt that higher education, in any genuine sense, can be adapted to mass production. College degrees, yes, they can be provided in satisfactory volume even though at every step of fabrication the standard requirements be stiffened. There can be little question that boys and girls today must work much harder for the credits which entitle them to a sheepskin than did their fathers and mothers. It is quite as patent that they have accepted the challenge, and in greater proportion than in any previous generation are winning through to their goal.

But that is not the point of the query, which is: What do they really know when they get through, or what in the form of an effective education have they to show for their four-year effort and the money and pains spent on them in the course of it?

Very little, if we are to believe the results of a survey being completed under the guidance of the Carnegie Foundation. This is presided over by Dr. William S. Lear of the Carnegie Foundation staff and has the cooperation of 30 old colleges in Pennsylvania. Over a period of six years, it has been testing for the assimilation of key information the various classes in these institutions. The questions posed for the purpose are not of the ordinary examination type. They are at once much simpler and more searching, although requiring from the student merely a Yes or No, or a plus or minus sign, or, as in the case of the vocabulary test, the underlining of a synonym.

The vocabulary test, a fair sample, has consisted of a list of 100 words in "familiar use by educated people." The average senior in six representative institutions recognized only 61 out of the 100 words, the average freshman 56.

"The story of the test," to quote the annual report of the Carnegie Foundation, "brings us face to face with the familiar poverty of campus language, the absence of conversation on subjects of study, and the dearth of general reading on the part of students. A student out of the lower quarter of this senior group, in a paper crowded with meticulous pains, recognizes only 23 out of the 100 words correctly, is ignorant of such words as insert, lenient, baffle and immerse; thinks that culpable means tender, that deliverty means climate, and that demure means abject."

In general, the tests have shown either that freshmen retained more knowledge in a given field than seniors, or that the seniors' superiority was so small as to offer no remote justification for the years of academic application which separated them.

All of which, in Dr. Learned's opinion, constitutes a serious indictment of the American system of administering and measuring education. It is administered, as he says, in "isolated packages of specific ideas, segregated for the time being in self-contained 'courses,' elected semester-wise and cut off by their examinations and 'credits' from any other living connections."

Naturally, as one course succeeds another and the credits toward a degree are secured, like bolts in a chassis, the average student relieves his mind of what has gone before in favor of the tasks ahead of him. This accumulation of credits, as a measure of intellectual stature, is, to Dr. Learned's way of thinking, "somewhat analogous to a record of physical growth that should content itself with adding together the amounts of weights of food daily administered to a child, and take no thought of the actual growth of the child itself."

But there can be doubt that it is a convenient system, given the mass-production idea. The raw material moves from point to point on schedule.

Consider the complications that would ensue were the counting of credits abandoned for a less automatic method of valuation. Suppose not the information a student temporarily retains, but his ability to think with it thereafter were the objective and criterion of his college career. This would require personal cultivation, which is costly in time and money (a highly developed tutorial system, let us say), and schedules and curricula too elastic to resemble assembly line.

With such a change, there would be fewer graduates. This would by no means satisfy the huge popular demand for degrees, but it would make each degree stand for something. And it would save a lot of boys and girls a great deal of effort and expense in the pursuit of a useless badge.

Well, not entirely useless. There is something to be said for the possession of a college degree as an offset to a feeling of inferiority which might otherwise seriously damage a youth's prospects. This, of course, is the real reason behind the national urge for it. But how long will that urge last if it can be demonstrated that one may know quite as much, if not more, without attending college?

A HANGMAN SLIPS.

JOHAN LANG, Austria's official executioner, has had a nervous breakdown from strain and overwork.

It has been apparent for some time that the political tension in Austria was so great that something or somebody had to crack. Most observers thought the inevitable blow-off would be a world war. But the diplomats are still outwardly calm and as large, while Herr Lang languishes in an asylum. This is preferable. But it is not justice.

F. D. R. on Merchant Marine

From the New York Herald Tribune.

WHEN President Roosevelt treats of the nation's ships he speaks and acts with authority and good sense. He grasps the whole problem. He sees afar consequences and implications. Therefore, when he really if politely invites Secretary Wallace to return to his little pigs and let the ships sail on, he will be applauded loudly and widely.

His whole comment upon the Secretary's remarks was a model of fairness and accuracy. True it is that, if this country abandoned its shipping to other nations, the effects of economic theory, he enabled to purchase more American products. Herein is a factor which, as the President agreed, must be duly weighed and considered. Unfortunately, in fixing his eyes upon this one point, Mr. Wallace ignored other but far more vital elements. These the President effectively stated.

Properly he placed first the need of a merchant marine as an aid to the navy in time of war. Such a fleet cannot be provided. Neither can its officers or men be marched on board over night. For a nation like the United States, with a long home coastline, far-flung dependencies and extensive trade around the world, the navy must seem controlling to every mind capable of seeing historical events in their true perspective.

With equal cogency, Mr. Roosevelt stressed the economic benefits of an American merchant marine. In the event of a general European war in which this country would not be involved, American foreign trade might easily be driven from the seas if there were no American bottoms in which cargoes could be carried. In time of peace, the close balance between commerce and the carrying trade in the case of rival nations is all too frequently squeezed American exporters out of an equal chance to develop markets. The sum of these benefits far outweighs any increase in foreign purchasing power which the abandonment of the sea might theoretically produce. The President is fully right. Secretary Wallace will not be permitted to "plow under" the nation's ships. It is safe to assume.

THE OVER-PRODUCTION MYTH.

REPEATEDLY this newspaper has called attention to the fact that it is not over-production but under-consumption which has put our economic machine out of gear. Now the Brookings Institution comes forward with the results of a survey showing that the over-capacity of manufacturing plants in 1929 was only about 20 per cent, and this percentage of over-capacity was found to be no greater than it had been for 30 years.

The myth that the depression was caused by the twins of over-capacity and over-production has thus received a heavy blow. Some economists had placed the over-capacity in 1929 as high as 200 per cent, and the technocrats made much of the downfall of civilization brought about by the Machine Age. The truth of the situation is that many of the large industrial plants of the country have obsolete equipment that needs replacement. We have been told that, should plants operate at full capacity, the output would so far exceed the market demands that prices would go tumbling down and profits would be wiped out.

The Brookings survey proves that with plants operating at full capacity and the purchasing power of the public restored, production could not meet demands. What we need to do is to rid ourselves of the myth of over-capacity of production and devote more attention to increasing the purchasing power of the American people.

MERRY GO ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10. (REUTERS)—The board of strategy of the American Liberty League reported angling for executive Director Lew Douglas for its list of star recruits. And, judging by private factors behind Lew's sudden exit from New Deal, he will join it.

His rift with the President goes back many months—back to a second and carefully-guarded incident during the closing days of the last session.

Without consulting Douglas, Roosevelt sent to Congress a bill calling for an additional $1,500,000 for PWA and unemployment relief. A die-hard "budget balancer," Douglas took it upon himself to go over the President's plan.

In personal letters to Senator Carter Glass and Representative James P. Buchanan, chairman of the Senate and House Appropriations Committee, he vigorously denounced these additional expenditures. In effect he urged that the measure be rejected.

This was exactly the way Glass and he were all set to publishing the letter when Senator Jimmy Bruce, Roosevelt's congressional boss, got wind of what was going on. He realized that if Douglas later saw the light of day it would create a tremendous furore.

Working fast, he persuaded Glass to allow him to lay the matter before the President. And Roosevelt, when apprised of Douglas' letter, was furious. He was for dismissing his Budget Director immediately.

By then, with his eye on the presidential situation, advised against precipitate action. He persuaded the President to call in Douglas, and get him to withdraw the letter.

Douglas bowed to White House pressure. But from then on he was "all washed up" with the President.

Cabots, Lodges, Roosevelts. HARVARD soon will have as many Roosevelts as it has Cabots. The families—the Cabots, the Lodges and the Roosevelts.

The full there will be five. The two additions are John Roosevelt, youngest son of the President, and Robert Roosevelt Jr., grandson of Theodore Roosevelt.

With them in upper classes at Harvard are: Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., another son of the President; and a sophomore, Cornelius Van S. Roosevelt, son of young Franklin, also a sophomore; Theodore Roosevelt III, another son of young Roosevelt.

The President's two youngest sons are different types. John, the youngest, is not particularly athletic inclined to be something of a sportsman, is at home on the floor committees of school proms.

Franklin D. Jr. has certain notable characteristics of his father: is athletic and the typical school leader type. He is of smaller stature than his father.

Both boys are intelligent and hard workers. Munitions Mystery Man. SIR BASIL ZAHAROFF, super-scientist of munitions, whose name figures so prominently in the sale of U. S. patented submarines to foreign countries, is not called Europe's "Mystery Man" for nothing.

nothing. Everything about him has been subject for decades to conjecture, and he never gives an interview.

He is supposed to be an Anatolian Greek, who as a boy fled Constantinople, charged with larceny by a well-to-do uncle, but on his arrest in London proved he was a partner in the firm and was freed.

He drifted over Europe, was a failure at 27 when he got a job as salesman in Central and Eastern Europe for Nordenfeldt, a munitions maker with a small plant in England.

On a train journey he met a Spanish Duchess, 17 years old, unhappily married. They fell in love. More than 20 years later they were married. Meanwhile, she was said to have helped him get Spanish war orders, lay the foundation for a fortune, which at the end of the war was said to be one of the largest in the world.

He has been accused of fomenting war scares to get munitions orders, to have forced Maxim, inventor of the machine gun, to go into partnership with him and Nordenfeldt. The huge earnings from the sales of this weapon helped him become the controlling owner of five great munitions companies.

President-Maker.

ONE story told on Zaharoff by the late Lord Thomson, British Minister in the Labor Government, dealt with a visit Thomson paid to Zaharoff in the latter's apartment in Paris.

After dinner Sir Basil produced a box of cigars. They were especially made and their aroma was delicious. Lord Thomson pressed great admiration, asked where they came from.

"I'll tell you the story of those cigars," replied the munitions salesman.

"Twenty years ago I had a secretary. He fell in love—always a great mistake—forgot a check and got into trouble with the police. Finally he came to me and confessed everything. I loaned him about $1000 with which he paid the check and cleared himself."

"That was in 1905. It is now 1925 and I have never seen him since. But this Christmas I received from him this box of cigars together with a check for $4500."

"He wrote me that he had gone to New York, thence to South America, became president of a country which shall be nameless and could afford to repay me with interest."

Mail Bag. T. O. R. Dayton, O.—The nation's total expenditure for unemployment relief, Jan. 1, 1933, to June, 1934, was approximately $1,340,000,000. This was exclusive of CWA which cost an additional $500,000,000.

D. S. S. Wilmington, Del.—No alcoholic beverages of any kind are served in the lunchrooms of Government departments. The House dining room sold beer last session, but the Senate did not.

P. L. Cleveland, O.—Under the Roosevelt administration, White House press conferences are limited strictly to "working reporters." Editors and other newspaper executives are barred. On occasion, however, "Steve" Early, White House press secretary, will make an exception—if the editor is sufficiently important.

The Old and the New in Bathing Costumes

FASHIONS in bathing costumes from 1885 to the present, as displayed yesterday afternoon at the Sunset Hill Country Club swimming exhibition. From left, MISS ESTELLE BLUMEYER, 1885; MISS MICKEY HYMAN, 1895; MISS MARY HENNIGAN, 1905; MISS MARIANNE BLUMEYER, 1915; MISS EMMA JOSTES, 1925; MISS ALICE JANE MEYER, 1934.

EVOLUTION OF BATHING SUIT SHOWN IN PAGEANT

Changes in Last 50 Years Are Depicted at Sunset Hill Country Club.

Bathing costumes worn at various periods in the last 50 years were displayed by models at Sunset Hill Country Club's annual swimming exhibition yesterday. Stockings and ruffles replaced bared legs and high lace necks took the place of the modern bandanna.

Six groups displayed bathing apparel worn by men, women and children in the passing years.

Women in 1885 wore a two-piece flannel suit in a color combination of green, red, black and white; long ruffled bloomers, long sleeves, high necks, black lace stockings, and a red and white bonnet. Their escorts chose a two-piece gray suit, trousers that reached the calf of the leg, and a knee-length blouse.

More Daring in 1905. Suits of 1905 were more daring. The skirt was a trifle shorter with semi-sleeves, extremely low neck, barely showing the Adams apple, and rolled stockings. Men in this decade abandoned long trousers in favor of two skirts and knee-length pants.

In 1915 bathing suits resembled the apparel worn in the short-skirt era which preceded present long dresses. They were made of pink flannel, with three ruffles on each side of the skirt. Knee ruffle pants were not visible and the suit was worn with a hair bow, socks, white slippers and a low square neck. Men dropped the double skirt and adopted one skirt, barely reaching below the hip.

A Prediction for 1930. The 1925 model exhibited the original black silk jersey suit with long black fringe reaching the knees. Stockings and the hair ribbon were forsaken while men braved censorship by wearing a one-piece suit above the knees.

Modern one-piece suits, with halter straps and no back, were widely overshadowed when little Jimmy Blumeier appeared in red cellophane trunks predicting the trend in 1930.

The costumes were designed by Miss Ada Jane Blumeier of 4 Washington terrace, who copied originals in style, material and colors. She said a woman's suit in 1900 cost between $35 and $75, including bonnet, shoes and stockings which were essential.

Stockings were required until 1922, and the suits began to be form-fitting in the following year. Low necks and sun-tan suits were introduced in 1925.

CHARLES KUNKEL JR., DIES; SON OF NOTED MUSICIAN Former Head of Conservatory and Publishing House Founded by Father Succumbs at 58.

Charles Kunkel Jr., former head of the Kunkel Bros. Music Co., and son of a noted St. Louis pianist and composer, died of a lung ailment yesterday at his home, 3750 Lindell boulevard, after an illness of about three years. He was 58 years old.

The music company, a conservatory and publishing house established about 60 years ago by the elder Mr. Kunkel, who died in 1923, went out of business last March. The father was a nationally known artist and a leader in musical circles here.

Mr. Kunkel is survived by his widow, Mrs. Anna Beckmann Kunkel; a son, Paul, and a sister and brother. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the Wacker-Heiderle chapel, 3634 Gravois avenue, with burial in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

MISSOURI LEGISLATOR W. E. WHITECOTTON DIES

Member of House From Paris Succumbs in Kansas City Hospital After Operation.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 10.—W. E. Whitecotton, State Representative from Monroe County, Mo., died yesterday in a hospital here where he recently underwent a major operation. He would have been 68 years old Dec. 26.

A Democrat in politics, Mr. Whitecotton was an opponent of lobbyists and an advocate of strict economy. During arguments on a cigarette bill, he once remarked on the floor of the House that he did not oppose women smoking but did object to "the terrible angles at which they hold the cigarette between their lips."

On another occasion during discussion of a proposal to raise the salaries of legislative members, he said: "As long as the people believe we are not worth more than $5 a day, I intend to vote against all salary raises. Perhaps the people out in the country are right in their opinion of our value."

Last year he assailed what he termed the "utility lobby," asserting "the bills the corporate interests want are passed but those the rural people want die on the calendar."

He was born in Ralls County. His education was in the public schools of that county and at the University of Missouri. He practiced law in Paris, Mo., and was elected to the State House for the Fifty-fifth to the Fifty-seventh Assemblies, inclusive. In the last one, the Fifty-seventh, he served as chairman of the House Committee on Ways and Means.

He was an experienced fox hunter and fisherman.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Late setbacks of values today followed announcement by the United States wheat ceding the late decline of wheat the market reflected buying of flour millers. The movement of wheat from rural sources was small, and bulk of arrivals here went to elevators, presumably for shipment East. ## DEADLY NEW WAR GAS FOUND ACCIDENTALLY

Chemist Reports Heat of His Hand Exploded Flask of It.

By the Associated Press.
CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 10.—Discovery of a new war gas, which can be exploded by the heat of the hand, was announced to the American Chemical Society last night on the eve of its eighty-eighth meeting.

The gas is a new chemical substance. It was found accidentally by scientists exploring in one of the rarer fields of chemistry with fluorine, a gaseous element of the halogen group and the most active of all chemical elements.

As a war gas it is only "potential," for by agreement chemists and governments alike are not seeking directly for new destructive gases. Industrially, the report stated, the new substance promises to open a wide field of possible usefulness.

Explodes at Touch of Hand.
The gas was discovered last May 4 in the laboratories of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, when some of it exploded in a flask held in the hand of Dr. George H. Cady, then an instructor at the institute. Cady is now with the United States Rubber Co. at Passaic, N. J.

Fluorine belongs to the same chemical family as chlorine, a war gas. Fluorine is found only in combination with other elements. In contact with hydrogen, combination takes place between the two gases with explosive violence. Fluorine is greenish yellow and has a choking smell.

Chlorine is green. In the same family are bromine, which is now mixed with some high-test gasoline, and iodine, the medicine.

"The new compound," said Dr. Cady's report, "is made of nitrogen, fluorine and oxygen. The proportions are three atoms of oxygen and one each of nitrogen and fluorine."

"Although it appears quite harmless, being a colorless gas, it has a strong odor and is very reactive chemically. Its most interesting, as well as its most treacherous, characteristic is that it explodes violently when heated."

"A blanket of the gas over the enemy's trenches would be destructive to life, and if the concentration were high enough, an explosion could easily be produced.

"When a small amount of the compound is inhaled, one starts coughing, and a deep breath, even of fresh air, taken after a coughing spell produces still greater irritation in the lungs. In this respect the gas is something like phosgene."

EDUCATOR SAYS REPORT CARDS MAKE SNOBS OR FAILURES

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 10.—The report card—the emblem of school-room success or failure for years—makes a failure of one and too often a conceited snob of the other," said Homer W. Anderson, Superintendent of Omaha public schools, in an address before a meeting of city teachers.

"We force a child to compete in a field where, by the very nature of things, he is doomed to failure," said Anderson. "The system does not tell whether the child is working up to capacity, except that it is taken for granted if he is an 'A' student. If he is a 'D' student, he is subject to abuse, even though he may be a slow learner competing with rapid learners. He may be doing his best. He may finally get discouraged and develop the habit of failure."

HOW BIG BANKERS ESCAPED PAYING OF INCOME TAXES

At the time of the hearings in June, 1933, five years after the short sales, the short position of the trusts had not been entirely covered.

Frank E. Taplin, former president of the Penrod Corporation, also used trusts for tax purposes. He added a remittance, according to the report, by changing his position from dealer in securities to that of an investor.

The report also recounted how J. P. Morgan & Co. used to advantage "dissolutions of partnership at propitious intervals for tax purposes. The committee experts charged that this was done when S. Parker Gilbert was admitted to the firm on Jan. 2, 1931, instead of Dec. 31, 1930. Under the then existing tax laws, the partners could take a loss at the time of dissolution, which could be spread over two years. By waiting two days to dissolve the partnership, the report said, the partners got an extension of one year during which a loss of $21,000,000 was available for income tax purposes. The report said that the bankers avoided themselves of $4,000,000 of this loss in 1932 and had approximately $17,000,000 available to offset against any profits made in 1933.

Laxity in Enforcement.
The latest report concluded with a section on "laxity in enforcement" of tax laws.

"Internal revenue agents" the report said, accepted without examination income tax returns prepared by J. P. Morgan & Co. on the assumption that preparation by that firm ipso facto established the correctness of the returns. For example, the tax return of Mrs. Margaret Y. Newbold for the year 1928, prepared by J. P. Morgan & Co., bore the following legend:

Returned without examination for the reason that the return was prepared in the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. and it has been our experience that any schedule made by that office is correct. The books of the taxpayer are located in Philadelphia, and if necessary schedule C may be verified in that city. This office, however, recommends that the return be accepted as filed.

C. M. SHEPPARD,
Internal Revenue Agent.

"Many other returns, particularly of partners in large banking houses, were likewise exempted from adequate scrutiny. When examinations were made, the time devoted to them was comparatively short, in view of the wealth of the taxpayers and the complex nature of their transactions. Thus, in 1930, according to the Bureau's own records, one day was spent in checking the partnership return of J. P. Morgan & Co. and Drexel & Co.—the most powerful banking group in the world. This return was not subjected to any field examination, and apparently the agent's explanation was sufficient to satisfy the Internal Revenue Bureau that none was necessary."

SAYS TWO NATIONS HAD AN ARMS RACE DURING ARMISTICE

corporation was formed as a sort of "skeleton sales agency" in December, 1933, by Miranda and other employees of the Driggs Ordnance & Engineering Co.

Got Idea From Trip.
Miranda, a Mexican, formed the corporation after a sales trip to South America in 1932. He said he saw possibilities of diverting to the United States much armament business then going to Europe.

Many Little Extras.
A letter introduced by Miranda, who at that time was acting as a salesman for the Driggs Ordnance Co., was to an officer of the latter concern. It said:

"Jackson, the commercial attaché, and Sackville, the military attaché, who are the respective spokesmen for the Embassy here on commercial and military matters, have been 100 per cent helpful."

Miranda mentioned he had cabled his New York office for $250 and explained:

this officer for lunch, and the other for dinner, and Sackville for cocktails, etc."

Evidence was introduced to show Miranda and his brother, operating an airplane export company, in March, 1934, expected a renewal of war between Peru and Colombia over Leticia and had chosen to do business with Colombia, because of its better financial position, and because of their close personal connections there.

"Big Time Is Expected."
At that time the brother, I. J. Miranda, wrote the Seversky Aircraft Corporation of New York about prospective sales to Colombia.

"As you know the armistice with Peru came to an end in about 60 days. Both Peru and Colombia are making great preparations and a big time is expected by all."

Miranda testified his company had "taken sides" with Colombia in the dispute because that Government was in a better financial position than Peru.

"Do you mean to say that you were soliciting and receiving orders from Colombia while both countries were striving to bring about peace?" asked Chairman Nye. "Soliciting but not receiving," replied Miranda.

He added that both countries had placed large orders for war materials in preparation for a resumption of hostilities, which, however, did not materialize.

Fire at Sea.
 King George in Business.
 Mysterious Zaharoff.
 Senator Long Moves.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.
 (Copyright, 1934.)

THE Ward Line steamship Morro Castle, carrying passengers between New York and Havana, barely "pleasure passengers," ended its career tragically Saturday morning.

The destruction by fire, with great loss of life, has unpleasant details. Servants on the ship said the fire started in the library, where a smoking party was carousing through the night.

"Many passengers died, trapped in their cabins, as they slept after a roistering night." This, of course, applies only to a few of the unhappy victims.

Also not calculated to inspire confidence among travelers, is the allegation that of the 85 that first came ashore from the burning ship, 80 were employees of the boat, only five were passengers.

England, shocked, much annoyed, hears of a cablegram announcing that King George had intervened personally to prevent the purchase by Poland of weapons made in America. There is no reason to be shocked. King George is the active member of Britannia, Lion, Unicorn & Co., and naturally, would get any business he could for British concerns. His job is not wearing a crown, but protecting British industry and his oldest son is one of the best salesmen for the British empire.

The British still resent the saying attributed to Napoleon: "The English are a nation of shopkeepers." That is what they are, however, and they are nothing else, except that they are also fairly good second-class manufacturers, unable to compete with mass production; slow, but good. Their so-called aristocracy, with funny little packs of hounds, belted Earls, strawberry leaves for Dukes, are mere trimmings for shop-keeping activities. The "shopkeeper" description is actually not Napoleon's. In 1794, Barere, speaking in the convention, said "Let Pitt, then, boast to his shopkeeping nation," and the Emperor Francis said to Napoleon in 1805, "The English are a nation of merchants. To secure for themselves the commerce of the world they are willing to set the continent in flames." British newspapers attributed the "shopkeeper" insult to Napoleon.

A shopkeeper is useful and respectable when not ashamed of his job. The discovery that the King is the head shopkeeper, will not shame anybody, except shopkeepers.

More interesting than a good business King as a money-maker, is the strange Greek figure, Basil Zaharoff; his history a mystery; his methods admirably simple; Maxims old and tried, "always pay the politicians well in war, be impartial, sell to both sides." Zaharoff is said to have accumulated one of the greatest fortunes in the world. It is amusing to read of some little officer in a South American country, paid about half a million dollars for persuading his Government to place a large order for arms in America. The South American country sold bonds to United States citizens to get the money to pay for arms. The bonds are worthless, and unfortunate Americans that were advised frequently not to buy foreign bonds, had the pleasure of paying for the weapons for a foreign country, supplying the money also.

Senator Long, who has moved 200 troops into New Orleans, is now a genuine "dictator." No real dictator is genuine unless he has bayonets behind his dictatorship. Farther north, this could hardly be done, although it may come.

Among soldiers called to New Orleans is the son of Alfred D. Amant, business man of Baton Rouge, La. With frankness worthy of the Senator himself, the father wrote to Senator Long: "If harm comes to my son through this mad effort of yours, I will personally kill you, as I would any other mad dog."

You may not like Senator Long, but anybody who saw him take charge of the Democratic convention in Chicago, can testify that he has will power. He proved it by stopping over night all the race-track gambling in his State. Not a newspaper in New Orleans carries a line about racing, and foolish creatures, accustomed to work for the benefit of race-track owners, touts and gamblers, find no gambler that dares take their money. This applies "especially to the little 50-cent and $1 bettors."

Those bets of 50 cents and $1 represent money that should buy shoes and food for children. What-keep you think of Long otherwise, you wonder why no other Govern-

Formal Dinner Gown Back in Style Parade

Black and White Combinations Most Favored—Interests in Two-Piece Frock.

By Sylvia Stiles

THE formal dinner gown is back in season. After being omitted from the summer wardrobe, it returns with renewed attractiveness and is a fashion highlight wherever smartly dressed women gather. Combinations of black and white seem to be the choice at present, and everyone will agree that there is no more stunning alliance.

Among the daytime styles noted during the past week, there has been a marked interest in the two-piece frock. Combination of skirt and blouse or of trimming and frock have proved effective. The costume consisting of dress and jacket remains a daytime favorite, however.

Black satin fashioned the skirt and white crepe flecked with silver fashioned the bodice of a flattering dinner frock worn by Miss Virginia Ebrecht at a dinner party at the Hotel Jefferson. The skirt was gored and slit at the hemline. The bodice material was unusually decorative as the silver flecks formed tiny squares. A high rolling collar was faced with black satin. Elbow length sleeves were gathered slightly and slashed so that the arms showed through. To complete her costume, Miss Ebrecht chose a black satin dressy beret and silver slippers.

The combination of black velvet and white satin proved equally effective, as demonstrated by Miss Inez Fitzgerald at the Park Plaza recently. The skirt was floor-length and fitted. The front extended in a narrow band to the high neckline, an effect that was most arresting. The satin bodice was cut with draped sections under the arms and with a low square back to the waistline. A rhinestone buckle adorned the waistline at the back.

A white lingerie collar supplied the contrast on the black ribbed crepe dinner dress which made Miss Leslie Mitchell a striking figure at the Hotel Chase. The skirt was cut on the bias so that it was form fitting. It was quite high of waistline and had a narrow belt. The neckline of the bodice extended to a low V and was emphasized by the collar of lace and embroidered organdie that was held with a rhinestone clip. Sleeves of black mousseline were pleated so that they were very full and were gathered into tight cuffs at the elbows. A novel evening cap of black velvet had twisted rolls of the fabric suggesting braids of hair wound around the edge, and slippers combined black satin with silver and gold.

Miss Nancy Gayler's navy blue wool jacket frock which she wore at luncheon at the Park Plaza was typical of several noted during the week. The dress was of the one-piece tailored type, its most distinctive feature being a collar of red, white and navy plaid wool that was worn outside the jacket. The coat was of the seven-eighths length. Sleeves were puffed slightly at the elbows and joined to long tight cuffs. A dark blue wool crepe sailor and blue dress orders completed the costumes.

Tomato colored wool crepe formed an alliance with brown wool to provide an interesting frock elected by Miss Margaret Parman for early fall wear. She appeared in this at luncheon at the Coronado. The blouse had a high round neckline and a tie of brown and white checked wool. Large wooden buttons adorned the front. Sleeves were three-quarter length. A brown wool crepe sailor matched the tailored skirt and carried out the two-tone color scheme with a tomato colored feather. Oxfords were of brown suede and kid, and other accessories were brown.

Creamed Ham
Three tablespoons butter.
Three tablespoons flour.
One and one-half cups milk.
One cup diced cooked ham.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One-fourth teaspoon chopped parsley.
One-fourth teaspoon chopped onions.
One-fourth teaspoon chopped green peppers.
Melt butter, add flour and cream. Add milk and cook until creamy. Add ham. Stir constantly. Add rest of ingredients and cook two minutes.

Harmony in Clothes and Complexion

MISS VIRGINIA MANOVILL, a brunette, has selected a gown for her first college dance in a flattering shade of green crepe. Its sleeves are formed of many rows of frilled and pleated net, and a single row of the net forms a collar around the very high neckline. The bodice is buttoned from neck to waist, and in the skirt we find the new slit. MISS DOROTHY MANOVILL has flattered her blond type of beauty with a gown of black velvet of period type. Its cape collar is sheered close to the high neckline and trimmed with white ermine. The same trimming is used on the short kimono sleeves. The skirt has a panel in back which is slit at the bottom and falls into a short train.

Puddle Muddlers Don't Want Cubs To Be in Movies

By Mary Graham Bonner

WILLY NILLY was, in a way, feeling very happy. The bears were ready to sacrifice even their cubs for him. Yes, they were saying that he should accept the offer made by the two men to take Blacky and Jupiter along so they could act in the movies. But the little man, Willy Nilly, had seen the tears falling from Jelly Bear's eyes and had noticed that Honey Bear had turned her back. Evidently she did not want to be seen for probably she, too, was crying.

"I have rather weak eyes as you know," growled Jelly Bear softly, "and sometimes they seem to water. But I wonder, Willy Nilly, if you'd go up to the cave and get a little package wrapped in brown paper."

A Coup Must Replace the Finesse When Dummy Has No Trumps

By P. Hal Sims

HAVING discovered that one of the opponents holds a guarded honor in the trump suit, the normal play is to enter dummy and finesse him for that card. If dummy has no trumps, however, the finesse must be abandoned and a coup substituted. There is no play more gratifying to the declarer, and more annoying to the opponents; particularly the one

George Unger had to coup the following hand in order to make six spades. The bidding: North 1 Heart, East 1 Spade, West 2 Diamonds, Pass, 3 Spades, Pass, 3 No trump, Pass, 4 Spades, Pass, 6 Spades, Pass, Pass. West, being the kind of player who takes a look laid down the ace of clubs. Finding nothing better to do, he continued with a small club. Unger played the ten spot from dummy, East covered with the jack and the declarer ruffed with the three of spades.

Two rounds of trump were played—and lo! West showed out, leaving East with the jack-small. The picking up of East's jack was accomplished in the following manner: A small heart was led and won in dummy with the ace. Unger then discarded a losing heart on the queen of clubs. The next play was to take three rounds of diamonds and ruff dummy's fourth diamond with the six of trumps. Dummy was now re-entered with the king of hearts. At this point, Unger was down to the queen-nine of spades, and East to the jack-eight. A card—any card—was led from dummy. East had to trump and Unger over-trumped. Perfect timing accomplished the coup.

Natural Diet Is Best Type To Be Adopted

The Sort of Food Man Eats - Can Effect Nations and History.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

THE SCIENCE of diet is so exact today that much is expected of it. No part of our daily routine, from infancy to old age, is more closely related to our health and happiness than the food that we put into our mouths.

If I were given sole control over its food, I could wreck a whole continent more completely than the most cruel conqueror with all the implements of modern warfare. Scurvy, rickets, dysentery, phthisis and anemia would follow in my wake. Skin would dry up and rot from shriveled limbs, ulcerous sores would form on listless bodies, eyes would glare over, feet would swell, nerves would degenerate, swollen bellies, thin pale faces above—the scene has been repeated many times on the face of the earth, not as the work of deliberate malignant ingenuity, but from an even worse enemy of mankind—IGNORANCE.

All the more pity, then, that today ignorance in its worst form—fanaticism and food faddism—should prevail so thoroughly scientific. The face of truth is often invisible. It does not lend itself to gaudy embellishment for display in the market place.

Thus we have one writer on diet who tells us not to worry about the amoebae dysentery scare—that the amoebae are not the cause of the dysentery, but the result—that they appear whenever dysentery appears. What rot! And what power for harm in such a statement. People who accept this folly might spread dysentery through a whole community.

Another superstition foisted on the community is that starch and protein should not be eaten at the same meal. Why not? The human body is a both protein and starch digesting machine, and they both work together. It is like taking a town where there are a number of factories and saying the ones which burn coal can't operate the same hours as the ones which burn oil. The things people want to know about a diet or an article of food: Does it produce acid? Is it fattening or reducing? Digestible? Roughage?

The best diet is a natural diet. Let us take this week some articles of diet and examine them—alone and combined—in detail. Answer all the above questions and many others. Let us take a perfectly natural diet, starting at breakfast and going through to supper.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Indigestion," "Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Be Prepared. Before starting that job of housecleaning this fall, protect your hands so they do not have to be apologized for at all the fall parties. Moisten some white soap and work it into the pores, around the cuticle and under the finger nails. It will be uncomfortable for a little while but when the day's work is over you will find all soil will wash off with the soap and none of that ugly black will have worked into the hands or nails.

Constance Bennett to Play Opposite Maurice Chevalier in "The Red Cat"

By Louella Parsons.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 8. The brief European journey Constance Bennett expected will probably lengthen into weeks if she remains at the Marquis de la Falaise's bedside. Late reports from Paris indicate that he is really much sicker than any one thought and his illness has been aggravated by the fact that he was away from any medical aid for so many months while he was filming his second travelogue.

Miss Bennett can take as much time as she needs for it is not necessary for her to report at the Twentieth Century studios until later in the fall when Maurice Chevalier comes back from his beloved Paris. She will play opposite the debonair Frenchman in "The Red Cat" and that ought to be a combination, Chevalier and La Bennett. But wait until you see Chevalier in "The Merry Widow." He is really something!

Get ready for another "Dinner at Eight" or "Grand Hotel." David Selznick is again getting ready to collect all the big names on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot to co-star in one big picture. The play he considers worthy of all this expenditure is "The Journey," an original by Fritz Lang, German director, and Oliver H. P. Garrett. This is really all I know about the story with the exception of Selznick's plan to put Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore and so forth into this production, which will not be made, of course, until "David Copperfield" is out of the way.

Gladys George, New York actress who married a millionaire and then found that marriage and a career do not mix, is on her way to New York. Miss George received permission to go East and appear in a Brook Pemberton play, "Personal Appearances." While in the East Miss George's friends say she will seek her freedom from Edward Fawcett, millionaire paper manufacturer. Interesting after her public statement that a girl can have both a career and a husband.

A Line or Two—Impromptu and charming was Francis Lederer's reply to Rupert Hughes' remark that he didn't know whether or not Max Reinhardt was a good actor. Lederer, asking permission to go to the Reinhardt dinner to speak, said that Reinhardt was the best actor in the world. He said he knew because he had been a Reinhardt pupil. Traveling cross-country all by herself except "for her dog," Jobe, Beth Brown landed in Hollywood. Her book, "Hobo Girl," has had several queries from film producers, so Miss Brown, who is an experienced author, came West to talk to the film magnates in person. Stopped in to see Sally Eilers and the new Harry Joe Brown heir; he is so like Harry Joe that the likeness, even in a baby less than a week old, is really funny. Sally has been sending notes to Charles Laughton, who is also in the cedar of Lebanon and who in turn is sending her notes and gifts. Sidney Lanfield is also a patient in the same hospital.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Rabbi Magnin's speech at the Max Reinhardt dinner winning favorable comment; Norma Shearer lovely in pale blue chiffon with ostrich feather coat to match; Marlene Dietrich in white, Helen Hayes in blue, among the attractive women who assembled to do the great producer honor; Mrs. Samuel Goldwyn, hostess of this auspicious occasion, attractive in shell pink; Fred Niblo's address of welcome, surprising even his most ardent admirers; Gloria Stuart lovely in white, taking a bow, also Walter Connolly and John Lodge who are to be in Reinhardt's "Midsummer Night's Dream"; Anita Loos who visited the distinguished visitors at Salzburg, greeted by Reinhardt, also John Emerson, the Adolph Zukors, Emanuel Cohen, Eddie Goulding, Rouben Mamoulian, Ernst Lubitsch, Josef von Sternberg among those who welcomed the European producer; Eddie Cantor's matchless wit much appreciated; also Rupert Hughes' analysis of Shakespeare; Al Jolson singing in rare form, getting an embrace from Reinhardt; Elizabeth Allen's cocktail party a farewell to her husband; William O'Brien, a huge success; Mrs. Elsie Torrence, Ronald Colman, Gloria Swanson, Herbert Marshall, Evelyn Laye and Frank Lawton among those who accompanied Liz and her husband to the airport; Doris Kenyon's birthday party went on and on and everybody had such fun; Mrs. Earl Anthony by far the best looking matron in our town, helping Doris celebrate.

Envy Poisons The Beauty in Human Hearts

By the Rev. J. F. Newton

BERTRAND RUSSELL says that envy is the besetting vice of middle life, as avarice is of old age. Both are petty, mean, cruel, and we ought not to let them grow on us.

The man who has passed the meridian of life without attaining to very much, is apt unconsciously to take a jaundiced view of the deserts of those who have done better. It is an ugly trait of human nature, but most of us find a wretched joy in speaking ill of those who achieve what we cannot emulate, and the habit grows with the years. An ancient writer said that there is something in the good fortune even of our best friends which is unwelcome to us, while their bad fortune gives us a secret joy.

It is horrible, if true. It is not universally true, but we can discern instances of the working of this bad spirit in almost any circle; and it is depressing. If any one doubts the fact let him listen to the talk of elderly folk and note how easily and often the tone of depreciation enters their comments upon others of their own age who have outdistanced them in life.

It is appalling. It shows the seamy side of human nature, its effort to exalt itself by belittling others who surpass it. Every great man is the victim of this vile, heart-snapping envy, which discounts his achievement. The attitude of the older to the younger generation partakes too much of this same spirit. It is so even between father and son more often than we are aware. To envy is, in its joy, its day in the sun, its opportunity, is miserably mean. Yet it is a part of the reluctance of older men to let go the helm and take second place the youth feels it, though not always knowing what it is.

Envy is the meanest of vices. It kindles hell in the human heart. It can poison life, making us as mean and miserable as we make others by lack of generosity. As we grow older we ought to be more magnanimous, more appreciative. We have had our chance—now let others have a turn, and cheer them to victory even where we are lost.

To be selfishly critical and envious, is the worst of all defects. To rejoice in the triumphs of others is not only gallant—it is actually to share their glory. (Copyright, 1934.)

Jennifer Hale

A New Romance

By ROB EDEN

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN.

WITHOUT taking his eyes off the two men, Ives slid into his swivel chair behind the desk, and pulled two books in front of him, a rest for his right arm which held his gun. His left hand picked up Andy's gun which he had put on the desk. This, too, was trained on Kent and Andy.

"Now that we're comfortable—" he laughed and his fair eyebrows raised a little. His prisoners looked far from comfortable, for their arms were still raised above their heads. Kent was leaning back in his chair, but Andy was sitting alert on the edge of his, both feet planted firmly on the ground. The expression on his face, after the surprise of Ives' entrance from the coat closet, was normal, uninterested, slightly vapid. His eyes, however, were very bright. They were trained first on the gun in Ives' right hand, then on Ives' face.

There was perhaps a two or three minute silence before Ives spoke again. Kent's arms were beginning to ache. The quiet in the room seemed terrible to him, more dreadful than if there had been a pandemonium of noise. The light glinted on the nickel of the pistol Ives was holding in his right hand. Andy's revolver was in his left. Ives looked blue under the full glare of the light.

"I'll hear your case against me, Young. I'm curious to know how you've built it up." Ives laughed again, and the laugh sent a chill through Kent, for it was not a sane man's laugh. Andy started to speak.

"You killed David Corey, who was the best friend you ever had." Kent waited for one of the automatics to go off, but it didn't, and there was Ives' laugh once more, a chuckle more than a laugh this time.

"Go on," he said, and with his left elbow, he moved over an inkstand so Andy's gun would have a rest. Kent waited for some sign of relaxation, but Ives' body was tense. Even when he laughed it remained tense.

Andy's voice was calmly quiet as he continued. He might have been discussing the case with a completely disinterested party. "It starts back in June when Corey lent you $3000, a friendly loan because you needed it. You'd been plunging on the market, heavily to try to make up losses in your business. You probably told Corey the money was for your business."

Andy paused, and Ives spoke. "I did tell him that." "You told him it would be a short term loan, and you intended it to be, but you figured without the market. In July it started to drop. You covered your losses as best you could. In August you needed another $3000 for a business deal. You asked Corey for it."

Again Andy stopped, and again Ives spoke. "I did." "He refused you, so on Aug. 6 you procured a fountain pen with the same point his had, also some ink which he was accustomed to use and forged a check for $5000. You banked in the same bank he did. It was no trick getting a book of Security-First National bank checks. You only had to use one of your own books. You knew enough about Corey's personal business to know that he never numbered his personal checks. I don't know, Ives, whether this was the first check you ever forged or not. I think it was."

"It was," Kent heard Ives say. In the little silence that followed he wondered if he were really in Ives' office, and Ives was sitting at the desk holding two guns. Or whether he was dreaming.

Andy continued in the same even voice. "By this time business was a little better. You hoped you'd be able to put the money, the $5000 back into Corey's account in a few days, or have it for him if he found out about your forgery. I think you were honest about that, Ives. I think you wanted to return the money."

"I did."

"But the deal you expected to have through in a few days—the deal for which you had forged the check for $5000 was delayed. You were almost crazy. Corey didn't know about the check yet, for the bank had honored it without calling him. He would know by the first of the month, when his statement came in."

"The first of September when the regular statements for the bank were sent out, you were desperate. Your deal, you thought, had fallen through entirely. Corey would find out about the check. He had a peculiar sense of justice, I hear. His sister told me about it. He couldn't stand being bilked by his friends, especially when he had helped them. You knew that trait in him, too. Several years ago, he had made no move to help a friend who had forged a check on him, although you urged him to help the man. Mrs. Richardson told me that."

"You knew Corey was going out with Jennifer Hale the evening of September first. You knew, also, they were going to dinner, and he wouldn't open his personal mail before he left the apartment to meet her. He never arrived home until after six, and he had to change his clothes. I don't know how you got your key to his apartment, Ives."

Ives interrupted. "I'd had it for a long time. A year. Had it made when Corey left his keys at my place once."

Andy continued. "That puzzled me. How you got in. Well, September first you damaged the igni-

SYNOPSIS:
KENT SEVERN is stunned when he discovers that the girl he loves is really JENNIFER HALE, wanted in Los Angeles for the murder of DAVID COREY. When she is returned to Los Angeles for trial, Kent raises all the money he can and follows to hire the best defense attorney in the city. ANDY YOUNG, a private detective, who stumbled onto the girl's identity, also goes to Los Angeles to collect the reward offered by Corey's sister, and to conduct some investigation on his own hook. Andy is fond of Jennifer herself, and believes that she must be innocent, as she doggedly asserts. All Kent's hopes collapse when the jury returns a verdict of guilty. But Andy cheers him with the tip that he believes the real murderer is PARKER IVES, a close friend of both Jennifer and Corey. Andy is making a thorough investigation, and is reporting his suspicions to police.

While he and Kent are going through Ives' office files one night Ives surprises them. At the point of his revolver they relinquish their own guns and sit down before him, arms upraised.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

tion system in your car yourself. That must have been about seven. You had mechanics come for your car, and you went over to the garage a few minutes, later, to see what was the matter. You stayed at the garage perhaps five minutes, and then walked on to Moore House. Sherman had fallen to sleep after dinner, as he usually did. He gets very sleepy after a heavy meal. You had to wait at the service entrance of Moore House for some time to get up the stairs, because you didn't want anyone to see you. You probably hid in the bushes until everything was clear. The Negro porter annoyed you with his puttering around. It was probably 8 o'clock when you got upstairs, meeting nobody on the stairs. You went immediately to the desk where Corey's mail was lying unopened. Andy's voice was getting a little huskier. He cleared his throat.

"On the desk was a revolver but you knew about that. Corey had shown it to you the night before. A real estate client, one of the shadier kind, had presented it to Corey, and it amused him."

You found the bank statement you wanted, and you carefully steamed it open in the kitchen with gloves on your hands. You were leaving nothing to chance. You found the check you wanted, and took it, and carefully sealed the envelope again and put it on the pile on the desk. The check you put in your wallet. You were just leaving, Ives, when you heard Corey's key in the door. You were trapped."

Kent's eyes left Ives' face, and lowered to his right hand. There was not a quiver in the fingers that held it. The left hand was steady.

"Off the living room is a long coat closet. You stepped in there, but did not have time to close the door after you. It must have been a trifle ajar when Jennifer and Corey entered the room, and through the crack you could see the desk, you could even see the gun on the desk. Corey and Jennifer were quarreling—but we won't go into that. You saw Jennifer pick up the gun from the desk absent-mindedly, and put it down again. She did this several times. You were very much frightened, I think. You hoped they'd clear out soon—that Corey would suggest taking Jennifer home or Jennifer would suggest he take her home, so you could get out. You hadn't counted on Corey's coming home so soon. A boy came with a telegram—and went. Jennifer finally decided to go home alone. She went, and you—you, Parker Ives were still in the coat closet!"

It is part of a wholly delightful two-piece frock. The skirt is plain but perfectly modeled. The interest centers on the blouse which has a most becoming yoke with two points in the front and one in the back, from the tips of which proceed inverted pleats that open and flare below the belt—as we have mentioned before. Interesting ways of trimming the round neckline with ribbon are shown in the small sketches at the side.

FRISBY'S ENEMIES NEVER SLEEP

CONGRESSMAN STRIKES BACK AT PLOTTERS

By CONGRESSMAN FRISBY

To what lengths will not the enemies of good government go in their campaign to discredit Horace W. Frisby and ruin his chances in the forthcoming political struggle! Ah, my friends, their efforts would be laughable in the extreme did they not strike at the very foundation of democracy. And that is an enlightened electorate, unbiased by the vicious mud slinging of those who have good reasons to hope yours truly will be retired to private life.

In my travels about the country, especially in the small towns from which Frisby has always been proud to draw most of his political support, I find any number of these mocking structures, placed there in order to point the finger of scorn and ridicule at your Congressman. A dastardly plot it is, friends; an out-and-out canard, without any foundation in fact, whatsoever. Although as a matter of fact, Frisby has always been a liberal in his private life and will sometimes accept a cocktail before dinner when "out with the boys."

Maybe it'd help more if we had regulations requiring distillers to tell their customers what isn't in the bottle.

Another gal who'll not live long On the slightest hint breaks into song.

And what this country seems to need is more conventions that can pass up a resolution.

Another of the better rules of political success is to always build up public opinion before you bow to it.

Anxiety About Final Results Hampers Work

Achievement Is Greater When Total Energy Goes Into Efforts.

By Elsie Robinson

OFTEN, when times have been tough during these last years, I think of that story they tell about Gertrude Ederle when she swam the English Channel.

She was, as you know, the first woman ever to conquer those tricky waters. But she wanted to do more than that—she wanted to beat the record established by men. Could she—a 19-year-old girl, lacking her full, mature strength—perform such a physical feat?

There a head loomed the blur that was England. And—perhaps—fame! How many Elsie Robinson swinging strokes of the strong, brown arms, how many drives of the powerful young legs through the churning waters would it take to reach that blur? How deep would she have to breathe—how fast—how long?

Like an iron band the anxious questions began binding her brain. Like quicksand the sense of hurrying tension began tugging at her body. Imperceptibly, her pace slackened. Slowly, terribly, the wall of water seemed to rise before her, showing her back.

Then, suddenly, her trained intelligence took charge. She—by her own anxiety—was building that wall between herself and success. By her own worried calculations she was weighing down her body, wasting her strength. There should be no more waste—no more worry! And so—

She quit looking—and swam. Deliberately she stopped doing everything but the one thing that it was useful to do—SWIM. How far away was land? How much longer would it take? Would she break the record, and if so, by how much? There was only one way to answer those questions—and she took it. She stopped looking, stopped wondering, stopped fearing—AND SWAM.

Many a time when the going was tough I've remembered, and been glad for, Gertrude Ederle. For who knows where any of us are going these days, or when we'll get there? How long will this job last?

"Will my health hold out?" "What are people thinking of me?"

"Am I getting as good a deal as I deserve?"

"Is someone doing me dirt?" "How about that blunder I made yesterday?"

"How about that job I've got to tackle tomorrow?"

"Suppose I DON'T make the grade—what will happen?" Questions like these are a million more, are nagging all of us—thickening in an iron band about our tired brains—tugging like quicksand at our discouraged hearts. The trail ahead grows blurred. Our speed slackens. We feel ourselves grow weak.

STOP IT! Stop looking—and swim! There's a time for sensible anxiety and proper calculation—but that time has passed. Now you're in the thick of the battle and there's just one thing to do—STOP LOOKING AND SWIM!

Forget the other fellow. Forget yourself. Forget the past and the future. There's one thing and one thing only that will determine your destiny now. And that's YOUR PRESENT PERFORMANCE.

You've got a certain distance to go. And there's just one thing in the world that will cover that distance for you, and that's—YOUR OWN FIGHTING STROKE. YOUR OWN STEADY, PLUCKY, PLUGGING ON THE JOB.

Plain advice? Maybe—but believe me, plenty powerful! And badly needed by about 121,000,000 in these United States. For we're all in an endurance drive. Some of us are going to win out. Who? It won't be the lads who waste themselves on prophecies or promises, frets or fancies, theories or threats. It will be the lads who have the sense and the gumption to quit worrying and stop looking—and SWIM!

Walter Winchell on Broadway

Just a Man About the Town

Clara Kimball Young hasn't enough misery... So one of her interviewers quotes her along these lines: "Your hair is so gray, why don't you dye it—and look younger?" To which Clara is supposed to have answered: "Because my public has always been loyal to me—so why should I fool them now?" List it, please, among the funnier sob stories. But Miss Young couldn't have possibly made such a sappy statement. Only a movie columnist could. Milton Berle, who recently opened in a musical show, which was flogged by the critics, was on the defensive, again. "After all," he said, "I'm no ham!" To which a sidewalk tormentor, whose eyebrows elevated, replied: "You're not exactly roast beef, either!" Wonder if that tap-dancer saw a mag critic's constructive criticism? To wit: "He looks as though he is frightening himself to death."

Heheheh... Got the titters, got the titters—and the more I think about it—I get the titters. I mean about the fortune teller woman on Eighth Avenue, who used to have her store near the old morning paper near 50th st. Her palm readings and other clairvoyance were the talk of the neighborhood and she made a lot of coin. That is, until the illusion was melted. They found out that every day she would go upstairs to the editorial rooms of the racing authority to ask him for tips on the next day's races. The foreword to the notice he wrote on the first very comical book, "Blue Plate Special," included a misquote, I learned later. Referring to one of Runyon's poetic classics, I wrote that the line I liked was: "Gimmee a handy guy like Sande bootin' those winners home!" It doesn't go that way, at all, some of the better proof-readers in town point out. What distresses me, however, is the hunch that the author (who would have caught the error had he seen it) didn't even read it!

About the only reward most lo-calls receive after they've done a good deed—is a mention of it in columns such as these... F. Stanley, for example, is waiter number 28 at the Casino de Paris. He finds lost pocketbooks containing sums of money and returns them to his boss until claimed... Do! Skene, one of the better sports oracles for the gazettes, recently did a novel about the ring called, "The Red Tiger." The critics praised it unanimously... Skene's eyes have been failing him rapidly, and he hasn't been able to read the sugary reports, which it is presumed, were read to him. One of the sensational producers still ha critics... He was anking out of a night place the other dawning and someone remarked that he was going out... "Gee," exclaimed a caustic observer, "I didn't recognize him for the moment without a flop show."

Percy Hammond, the critic, who has been at it for 30 years, is difficult to please—but for good cause. Take the last "Follies" review. Hammond covered his first "Follies" in Chicago about 25 years ago... The 1934 version opened with a joke familiar to his ears... He finally went to his files—looked up the notice he wrote on the first "Follies" he saw in Chicago—and darned if the same gag wasn't quoted by him from that show... When I am Dictator of New York, among other items that will be outlawed will be those itinerant bandmen who come to town with a song... Even those with a sensayuma... That crew the other 8:30 a. m. frintance... They tootled away in those ungodly hours, playing: "Sleephead, come on get outta bed, etc."... The fooms.

Recently the newspapers felt sorry for a CCC worker... They reported that he was working for $1 daily although his song was still one of the favorites... What they said was "Happy Days Are Here Again"... A very touching tale, indeed... But the song was written by Jack Yellen and Milt Ager.

Does your face suit you?

Here's a beauty treatment you can give yourself

It will be beneficial, whether you are a very young woman or one who has seen more summers than you care to mention.

THIS treatment is being used by many who formerly overlooked a very important reason for the reflection in their mirrors which made them dissatisfied with themselves. A tired-looking face is unpleasant and unattractive even to its owner... and it is just another case of cause and effect. Therefore, the best and quickest remedy is to remove the cause.

Instead of standing for hours and hours smoothing wrinkles out of clothes and ending with sore muscles, an aching back, aching feet, and, perhaps, a headache (all of which is reflected in the face) an electric ironer does the work. It's done in two-thirds or half the time, the lady is comfortably seated all the while and isn't "all in" at the finish.

NO, we're not going into the "Beauty business!" We've been in it for years, but now, more than ever, women realize that electricity can relieve them of the work that gives them tired-looking faces.

Have you seen the Whirlpool Electric Ironer we are selling at $59.90? It can iron everything that is ironable. Maybe you'd like a new Electric Washer too. Look at the ABC at $49.50. These electrical servants are so easy to buy and cost so little to operate that you shouldn't be without them.

See the Electric Washers and Ironers Shown by Your Electric Dealer.

ARY was determined to be a writer, and was always composing verse or scribbling tales. To be sure, she seldom completed anything, for every new idea she had, she would drop it, and immediately she was writing and scribbling again.

Her great ambition was to send something to a magazine and have it printed, but here her parents intervened. When you have written something of value and so perfect that it no longer has to be excused on the ground that a child wrote it, you may send it out to some publisher.

She is still hard at work, and writing is improving, partly as a result of the standard set by her father.

The world is flooded with the scribbles of children. Some of these youngsters have undoubted talent, many are merely publicists, and most of them are heard from again. To encourage or even to permit children to publish their youth and inexperience by imposing their immature expression on the world, is of the crying injuries we impose upon them.

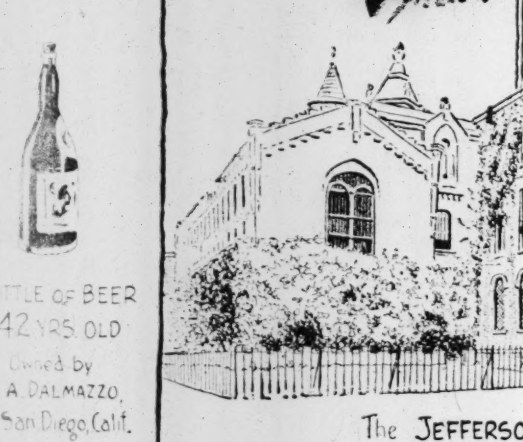

Nothing is lost by holding back budding authors, and much is gained by setting a standard that they can aim. If children are very apt to be content with mediocre work, and never to make an effort to improve. Furthermore, the glare of publicity in the case of children is bad for them.

Encouragement and constructive criticism at home and in school will help them to fulfill their ambitions more than the easy acclaim of a world prone to sentimentalism. Childhood accords the child the right to be a child.

Bleu Ghost

By Ellen C. Phillips

NOTHING but the end of everything could have interrupted Eve's romance with Roger Lanning. Blair Conway could not know that when he pitted his brotherly influence against that spring-like ecstasy.

Eve only laughed at him. "We love each other," she insisted. "That's great. But here's the thing," he argued. "He's my best friend and all that, but he's been married."

"Alice has been dead for two whole years. And if anything is dearer than an old love, I'd like to know it."

"There was never a love like theirs, Evie. You're a darling kid, as sweet as they come, but Alice was an extraordinary woman. She had a wild, free spirit that could never die. That's what would come between you and the man she loved so fiercely. He has never forgotten her, and he never will. No man could. His own reason why we shouldn't be happy forever and ever."

"You were in love with her," she accused. "Blair, whatever you say, Roger and I are getting married. There's no earthly reason why we shouldn't be happy forever and ever."

"No earthly reason," Blair repeated. "But there is—your jealousy! You're a little spiteful. You hate anything that comes between you and those you love. You'd drive Roger and yourself wild with your jealousy. He spent four years with the most perfect woman ever created and you will hear him refer to her hundreds of times—you won't be able to keep that green-eyed cat inside you with her claws sheathed and her teeth hidden. It will break out every time you hear her name."

—her hair was like sunbeams." "Blue eyes?" "Like two pieces of sky on a May morning."

When she had been married six months Eve no longer wondered how Alice had looked. She knew. Alice had come to live with her. It was funny—that night when the woman came for good. They were sitting before the fire in Alice's perfect living room and Eve was watching Roger as she often did. He was so big and so dear. Suddenly there was some one else there, standing close beside them, a woman, tall and slight of form, with a mass of yellow hair and blue, blue eyes. Her hand lay on his dark shoulder. Tenderly she looked down on the man she had loved. Very definitely, she wore a blue dress.

Eve came slowly over to cuddle her own smallness in Roger's arms. One tiny hand touched his shoulder and pushed it slightly, so that he looked surprised. She brushed the black glory of her hair against his face. Then she drew away and asked, abruptly: "Roger, where did you get that long, golden hair?" She held it up in the light and it gleamed like a living thing.

He dismissed it lightly. "Must have come off Alice's coat when I wrapped it up for the Salvation Army."

The days dragged on and each night saw the blond woman standing just behind Roger at mealtime and following him up the wide stairs at night. She always wore blue and smiled mysteriously.

Then one night Eve and Roger discussed a dinner party she was giving for his friends. She always wanted to please him.

"What kind of dress shall I get?" Absently, he answered. "Blue, Evie, a pale blue. I love it."

Eve got up slowly and moved away toward the stairs. Roger sat looking into the fire. What he saw there she never knew. She had ceased to wonder.

When she came downstairs again he was still there. She stood at the door, something in her hand pointing to that which she saw just behind him. There was a dull explosion. Roger continued to stare into the fire, but a little smoking hole in his shirt front, turned crimson. Behind him was nothing now. Everything had ended.

Let's EXPLORE Your MIND

By ALBERT EDWARD WIGGAM, D. Sc.

See Whether His Opinions Agree With Your Own

AUTHOR'S NOTE: These answers are given from the scientific point of view. Science puts the rights of organized society above the rights of individuals.

- We have no measurements for giving an exact answer, but the mere fact that like tends strongly to marry like would argue quite in the affirmative. Since the automobile, airplane and other means of travel have enabled most people to meet ten or a thousand of the opposite sex, where formerly they could meet but very few, would make it pretty certain that we would find this tendency operating more strongly today than ever. I have done some rough researches that indicate it.
- Just the opposite. Writing monthly, Dr. M. Luckiesh, director Lighting Laboratory, General Electric Co., says: "Modern science with its cold facts... is generally supposed to be devoid of beauty and human interest. This is not true. Any science is an array of cold, lifeless details; but so is any structure, even the human being. The parts of a huge locomotive strewn on the floor... are uninteresting. But assemble the parts and put the locomotive into action. Then who shall say it is without beauty and human interest?" He points out, as Tennyson said, that if science could only teach us all about a flower we would "know what God and Man is."
- Yes, because it gives them a good excuse for their lazes in not having studied harder or observed more closely, and thus having forgotten what they should have remembered. What they should say is: "I was too lazy to study the matter or to review my information and for that reason I have forgotten." Psychologists have shown that most people have a far better memory than they think they have.

YA-YA! SIS HAS GOT ANOTHER RUN!

"Was I mortified! Just when I had a date with the smoothest man in town that kid brother of mine had to spoil it with a crack like that. Runs were always cramping my style."

"But Jerry was swell about it. He said his sister used to get runs all the time, too, before she started using Lux. Believe me, I've taken to Lux! Luxing stockings after every wearing is the slickest trick I know. I hardly ever get runs any more."

They Both Lead by the Nose

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

WE don't know what Mussolini said to Hitler in Venice, but they weren't talking about gondolas.

Whatever it was, they are having a contest to see who can be the biggest Dictator.

Adolph says he can see ahead 1000 years, and Benito says the women cannot do any more work.

We wish somebody could see ahead 2000 years and see the men not doing any work.

Looks like the contest for head man goes to Benito. If the women ain't going to work, that means the Duce is going to run everything and do the cooking, too.
